

TOUR OF WAUPACA-CO FARMS AND SPEECHES PROVES SUCCESSFUL

Crowd of 250 Visits 15 Farms While Making Rounds on Saturday

BY W. F. WINSET

Waupaca—The farm tour of Waupaca-co, planned and conducted Saturday by A. N. Howat, Smith-Hughes teacher of the local high school and backed by business men, bankers and farmers, was one of the most successful of its kind ever held in this part of the state. It required 75 automobiles to convey the 250 people that started and completed the 50 mile tour about the county, and made 15 stops at as many farms to see the results of modern methods of farming and to turn in the evening to the court-house in time for a movie entertainment and talks by Prof. G. H. Briggs and Prof. Louis Samman, both of College of Agriculture.

What made the tour exceedingly entertaining and instructive was that at each farm, where stops were made there was something out of the ordinary to the eyes of the farm described the practice upon which his success in some special line of farming depends and experts of the College of Agriculture were on the ground and gave the scientific basis for the practice of the farmer and made suggestions for further improvements.

SPECIALISTS THERE

A picnic dinner was served at the A. D. Larson farm by the women of the Farmington Community club. After dinner, talks were given by Congressman E. E. Browne, Albert Smith, president of the Waupaca County Holstein Breeders' Association, A. D. Larson and others.

Specialists of the College of Agriculture on the tour who contributed largely to the success of the day were Prof. A. R. Albert, Prof. G. H. Richards, Prof. C. Kuehner, Prof. G. H. Briggs and F. G. Wilson, States Forester.

The first stop in the morning was made at the high school where a piece of corn nine feet tall with the ground seeded to alfalfa, a patch of potatoes with the vines almost as large as current bushes, and some young apple trees. At this place, Mr. Howat described how the pupils had worked the plot by hand after getting experience in plowing it with a tractor. Mr. Kuehner gave a demonstration on pruning fruit trees, recommended manure for fertilizer spread under the drip of the branches, spraying as often as is necessary this season the last time in August and Macintosh, Duchess, Wealthies, Northwestern Greenings, and Salomes as the better varieties of apples for this vicinity.

NEED FERTILIZER

At the Mrs. Charles Stinchfield farm, an alfalfa field was inspected that had a top dressing of potash. At this demonstration, Mr. Albert said, "If you have all the manure you need on your soil you are all right but produce the manure you must raise the potash to get the roughage you must raise crops."

"Alfalfa and sweet clover must have lime, however," continued Mr. Albert.

The speaker recommended the use of potash and phosphate also on sandy soils and said, "If you are not using commercial fertilizer on your crops, the sooner you begin the better."

Mr. Richards said that in the analysis of soils, farmers may have the service of the State Laboratory at the State Laboratory at the cost of $5.00. As a part of that service, the laboratory sends a representative to the farm to inspect growing crops and to take soil samples. The Soil Improvement Service also is available to farmers who do not wish to pay the $5.00. If the latter service is selected, the farmer sends samples of his soil to the College of Agriculture for analysis.

VISIT FUR FARM

The Guy Anderson Fox and Mink ranch proved to be of great interest to the tourists. "When Howard wanted to start out raising minks, I thought there was something wrong with his upper story," said Mr. Anderson, Howard's father. But he now has a standing order of $150 a pair for all the minks he has on hand.

Fox Jensen has always used barnyard manure on his land. This year, he tried 100 pounds of 2-12-6 to the acre on his corn, skipping several rows here and there in his field. The corn in the rows fertilized is twice the size of the other and a much better color. Mr. Richards said Mr. Jensen will get back the cost of the fertilizer used in well filled ears, ripe corn and a big yield of dry feed, or in the difference between a light crop of soft and a heavy crop of ripe corn. He recommended broadcast commercial fertilizer on small grain, and placing it near the hills in the case of corn. He said that farmers should not guess at the results of using fertilizer but they should check up and find out just what their profits are.

On the R. M. McLeod farm, the tourists saw a demonstration of the scalding of quack grass with a large sulky spring tooth harrow drawn with a tractor. The spring tooth pulls the roots to the surface and owing to its peculiar construction, does not clog. After the roots are dry on the surface, they are raked in windrows and burned.

William Stange planted his field of corn on May 18. The corn is fully eight feet tall with ears formed. The field has the development of a good September field as the result of a first class rotation of crops and the use of the kind of fertilizer corn needs to grow rapidly and ripen early. He used 125 pounds of 2-12-6 to the acre.

BROWNE FOR TARIFF

"I believe that a tariff on wheat should equal the difference in the cost of production in this country and abroad," said Congressman Browne in his after dinner talk. The difference is 44 cents a bushel.

"The growers of wheat in this country produce a 15 to 20 per cent surplus that goes to Liverpool where it comes into competition with all the wheat of the world and where the price is fixed."

"The price of that surplus virtually

JONES FILES PAPERS FOR SHERIFF'S JOB

With Tuesday the last day to file nomination papers for county offices the only candidate to file with John E. Henschel, county clerk, Monday morning was A. W. Jones, 704 S. Pierce-ave. Mr. Jones is a Republican candidate for sheriff. He was born and raised in Appleton and is a wire weaver by trade. He is the fifth candidate to file papers for the sheriff's job although there are known to be at least four other candidates who have placed papers in circulation.

STATE BOARD DENIES KABAT'S PAROLE PLEA

Appleton Men Protest Release of Man Convicted of Murder Here in 1906

Wenzel E. Kabat, murderer of Michael McCarthy on a farm near Kaukauna in 1906, was denied a parole by the state board of control, following a hearing at Waupaca last Thursday.

Objections to the parole were filed by Albert H. Krugmeier, Appleton, district attorney of Outagamie-co when Kabat was convicted and T. H. Ryan, Appleton attorney engaged by Mr. McCarthy's family. Mr. Ryan attended the hearing.

Kabat was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state prison at Waupun on June 16, 1906, after a sensational trial here. He was accused of robbing and murdering Mr. McCarthy, and then cremating the body. Kabat has had numerous other applications for pardon and parole before the board and they have always been rejected.

Kabat escaped from prison in 1914, but later was recaptured in Minnesota.

ISSUE BENCH WARRANT FOR FARMER IN DALE

Charging her husband was getting drunk too often and didn't run his farm in a husband-like manner, Mrs. James Sexton was released as probation officer for her husband, James Sexton by Judge Theodore Berg in municipal court Monday morning and the judge issued a court order for Sexton's immediate arrest. Sexton was placed on probation to his wife last September after he was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm. The complaint at that time charged he attacked his wife. Sexton probably will be sentenced under that charge when he appears in court.

RETURNS FROM VACATION

Miss Dorothy Doyle, secretary to A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, returned Monday morning from a two weeks' vacation. Miss Doyle spent her vacation with a party of friends at a cottage on Gilmore lake.

COMMITTEE MEETS

The finance committee of the common council will meet in the office of the city clerk at 10 o'clock Monday afternoon. Bills will be approved and other routine business transacted.

fixes the price that the domestic growers get for their crop."

"The Haugen-McNary bill proposes to set aside a fund for the purpose of purchasing this surplus wheat at 44 cents a bushel above the Liverpool price, and of selling it to the best advantage in the market for the world. The home growers would then get not only a 4 cents advance in the price of their surplus wheat, but also that advance for their entire crop."

"Vice President Dawes and other financiers of this country say that the wheat price-fixing features of Haugen-McNary bill are financially sound."

"As farmers pay a tariff on everything they buy, it is only fair that they should get a tariff benefit on the things they produce."

LOOK OVER GUTTERS

On the Christian Miller farm, the tourists inspected the only system of gutters and cisterns for the storage of liquid manure and tank wagons for sprinkling the liquid on crops to be found in this section of the state. The capacity of the cistern is 40,000 gallons and the cistern is filled during the winter months from the gutters. The wagon tank is filled from the cistern by a small hand pump. By saving all this kind of fertilizer produced on his farm by animals, Mr. Miller does not have to buy fertilizer of any kind. The drains and cisterns cost him $150. He says he learned to fertilize land in this manner in Denmark where the farmers understand the better fertilization methods and practice them.

On the farm of William Schrock, the tourists saw wonderful fields of alfalfa, sweet clover and potatoes as a result of the use of lime, marl and commercial fertilizers. On this farm are 60 acres of potatoes.

On John Jarden's farm, workmen were spreading marl with a tractor-drawn spreader when the tourists arrived sowing a mixture of potash and phosphate with a horse-drawn drill behind the marl spreader, and seeding alfalfa with a combination drill and corrugated roller bringing up the rear. By the use of fertilizers, Mr. Jarden is raising alfalfa on abandoned farms.

Fishing With Dry Fly Best After Sunset In Evenings

BY B. A. CLAFLIN

While trout fishing, especially for Rainbows and Browns, will be better in August, right now is the time for displaying your skill with the dry fly. The water is clear, after quite low stage, altogether, conditions are in general call for skill of the angler in order to bring in a good catch. It is gratifying to be able to outwit the wily denizens of the brooks with a dry fly.

First, you must be properly equipped with a nine foot leader, tapered line and a good rod. Then, the matter of casting depends chiefly upon the insects that you find hatching over the surface of the water. Chiefly, I say, but not altogether, for there is scarcely a more successful fly to use than the Royal Coachman at times. And this configuration resembles no insect known to entomology.

The proper method to proceed in the use of dry flies is to always cast upstream. This requires considerable more work on the part of the angler than when wet flies are used. However, once the art is mastered, success will follow more often than it will when other forms of lures are used. The trout lie with their heads facing upstream. Therefore, they see the angler much less often, and once this happens, you will not get them. The real reason for casting upstream, however, is because your flies will not float in any other way. They must ride the surface as would a natural insect, wings cocked and drifting here and there in a perfectly natural way. Then, too, you must get your fly out farther than when you are using wet flies. I find a side swing very effective. It brings your fly to the surface with much less disturbance, and for that reason, your chances for a strike are much better.

As a rule, trout do not feed until about 8 o'clock in the morning, that is, to any extent. What I consider the best time for dry flies is after the sun has gone down. Particularly this is true of the big Browns. These fish attain weights up to ten and twelve pounds but rarely is it that one of the real large ones is enticed into striking a dry fly during the heat of the day.

A good stream for Browns is the Prairie river. Another one that yields good catches is the Emmons Creek. Radley Brook is also good water for them, as is the Iola river. The fish run large in these streams, but it requires good tackle of the proper kind, together with considerable skill to get them.

West of Waupaca is a good region for fly fishing, but the fish you will get are Speckled and Rainbows. There are several streams in that region. The Wausauke river, the main one, the Little South Branch of the Pike, the Big Eagle and others. As a rule, however, the fish do not run as large in size in those waters as they do in other places. I recently made a trip to those streams and, while we caught the limit of fish each day, the largest we had measured twelve inches.

BLAMES INCOMPETENTS FOR LOW FARM PRICES

Manitowoc—(P)—One cause for low prices on farm products is the fact that many incompetent persons have undertaken farming, and failed. Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman said in a speech delivered at the picnic of Manitowoc-Guernsey breeders here Sunday.

Other persons have been encouraged to attempt farming on unproductive lands, the governor said. "In other words, there has been over-speculation in agriculture. This condition is gradually being remedied, and farmers may confidently look to the near future for higher prospects."

Two years ago I suggested the farmer would have to work out his own salvation; that little could be done through legislation. Farmers in Congress and farmers in the Wisconsin legislature have failed thus far to find a method whereby government can aid the farmer."

PLAN COMMISSION HEARS APPLICATIONS

DICKENSON HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE

Loss of $2,000 Caused by Fire Starting While Family Is at Lake Cottage

Fire of unknown origin starting about 4:15 Sunday afternoon caused damage estimated at $2,000 at the residence of Kenneth Dickenson, 741 W. Front-st.

The Dickenson family was spending the day at their cottage at Lake Winnebago and the fire was discovered by neighbors who sent in the alarm. The fire broke out in the basement under the living room, and flames broke out through a window and crawled up the side of the house to the second floor.

Considerable loss was caused by smoke damage to valuable rugs and draperies, according to Mr. Dickenson, but little damage was caused by water.

A truck owned by Fischer's theatre and an automobile owned by Jack Blair, Indiana Ill. Ind., were damaged about 2:30 Sunday afternoon when they caught fire from a rubbish pile in the rear of the theatre. The rubbish started burning when someone threw a lighted cigar into it. Damage on both machines was estimated at $300.

COMMISSIONER KEEPS FACTORIES IN LINE

Madison—(P)—A number of complaints have been received by the state dairy and food commission charging that misleading statements concerning their products have been issued by certain butter and cheese factories.

C. J. Kremer, commissioner, says many buyers apparently understand the test so as to be able to show high prices per pound of milk fat or great efficiency on the part of factories. Others, he found, may over-read the test and cheat on weights.

He has warned one concern that he will be forced to prosecute if it offers for sale butter containing less than 90 percent of milk fat, or if it makes a false determination by the Babcock test.

PLUMMER IN RACE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Durand—(P)—H. L. Plummer, Saturday night opened his campaign for Republican nomination for lieutenant-governor, supporting Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman. He urged in an address that the two highest state officials should be sympathetic toward each other, should represent the same party, and the same general point of view in politics.

Gov. Zimmerman took part in the speaking program. Mr. Plummer urged the voters to elect men to office who are "thinking in terms of the automobile and not the horse-and-buggy age, men who are of the present generation, and understand its problems."

He pointed out that the lieutenant-governor becomes the state's chief executive in case the governor should die, resign, or be dismissed from office.

BALLARD IS SPEAKER AT PIONEERS' PICNIC

Visitors from New York and California at Hortonville for Annual Event

Although the attendance to the Annual Outagamie county Pioneer Association picnic Saturday afternoon July 28 at Hortonville, was not as large as it was last year it was satisfactory to directors of the association. Visitors came from as far as California and New York and from all parts of Wisconsin.

The chief speaker was Clinton B. Ballard, superintendent of public property at Madison and a former resident of Outagamie-co. Mr. Ballard told of his early life in the county and said Governor Fred Zimmerman regretted he could not speak at the picnic.

George Lausman, Appleton, entertained the visitors by whistling selections and an old time fire by Mrs. M. R. Stevens, of Rockland, Mich. was greeted with applause. C. F. Buck, 30, was the oldest member attending the picnic.

YOUNGSTERS HAVING BIG TIME PICKING DOOR-CO CHERRIES

Plenty Doing to Occupy Their Attention Evenings; Planning a Circus

About 400 boys from cities throughout the state are now under the supervision of Len Hennickson, Appleton, at Camp Chac, cherry pickers' camp at Sturgeon Bay, where they are daily picking cherries for the Door-co Cherry Harvesters' association. The high school band of Menasha arrived at the camp last Sunday and plays daily concerts as part of the evening entertainment. A program of sports and contests are planned for each evening after the boys finish their days' work in the orchards.

A camp circus has been planned for Friday evening, Aug. 3, and it is expected many people from Door-co and neighboring cities will attend. Many tumblers, acrobats and clowns have been found among boys, and a real circus performance is promised. Stunt nights are conducted Friday evenings and a group competition among the 400 youngsters is staged to determine the championship stunt makers of the camp. Swimming, baseball, track meets, volley ball and mass games are included in the daily camp program.

Mr. Hennickson is assisted by men from Lawrence college and the University of Wisconsin, including D. Draper, Harvey Bryan, W. Wright, Harold Eads, Kirk and Kenneth Miles, Robert Jones and Jerry Slavic. The commissary department is under the management of Mrs. L. Deacon, Kaukauna, assisted by eight girls.

FACTS ABOUT WISCONSIN

That Wisconsin dairymen find the best market for their product when it can be sold as fluid milk for city consumption is evident from the fact that six typical city markets last year paid an average price of $2.49 while four condenseries paid $2.15. The extent of the city market for whole milk in any state depends upon the industrial population of the state, as the following table indicates:

State	Industrial Population	Milk Consumed
New York	1,956,292	720,120,000 gal.
Ohio	678,742	233,658,000 gal.
Michigan	515,495	169,694,000 gal.
Wisconsin	247,341	116,480,000 gal.

With the heaviest milk production of all states, Wisconsin falls far behind these more highly industrialized states in the portion of total milk production which finds sale in the best market at the highest price. New York produces about 70 per cent as much milk as Wisconsin, but the value of New York milk sold at the farm is $4 per cent of the amount received by Wisconsin dairymen. From this comparison it becomes apparent that, though there is a discrepancy between milk production in New York and Wisconsin, the discrepancy between the two states in milk value is much less marked due to the influence of the high priced fluid milk market in New York's favor. This discrepancy in production and value is shown to even a greater extent by Minnesota which produces about 90 per cent as much milk as New York but receives for it only 69 per cent as much as New York receives. It is well to remember in this connection, however, that 70 per cent of New York's milk production is sold raw, in the form of milk and cream, for city consumption, serving as a striking contrast to the 10 per cent of Wisconsin's milk that finds sale in fluid form to the city trade in the less populous industrial centers of the Badger State.

Nash Believes In Keeping Money Busy, That's Why He Is A Success

It was characteristic of C. W. Nash, the great automobile manufacturer, to peel off his coat at a wayside restaurant in Redlands, Calif., and fry his own mess of trout, after a fishing trip there. Just as characteristic is the photo at right of Nash and Mrs. Nash, with a more conservative view in inset.

Kenosha — Two great automobiles, one world-leading corporation and a prodigy who has become the marvel of automotive business are the heritage of one man—Charles W. Nash.

The automobiles are Buick and Nash, the corporation is General Motors and the prodigy is none other than Walter P. Chrysler.

It was Nash who, back in 1919, set the tottering Buick Motor Company on its feet and started it on its successful career by instituting the six-cylinder motor in place of the four then in use. It was he who, in 1912, as president and general manager of the newly formed General Motors Company—it wasn't "corporation" yet—made a great power out of this organization.

Nash again, in 1916, introduced his own car and has made it one of the outstanding products in automotive manufacturing today. And it was he, finally, who took Walter Chrysler from the railroad shops, put him under his wing in the General Motors Company and gave him the opportunity that led to his historic fame.

HE'S MODEST AND PLAIN

Nash himself didn't backslide, however. He is now one of the leaders in the automotive industry, a millionaire many times over, builder of a splendid product, philanthropist and altruist. Nash gets down to his office early every morning he's in town and stays late, as busily at work as anyone in his shop.

When he has nothing to do in the office, Nash goes into the factory, where he is more at home than at his desk. For Nash grew up through the factory route and understands fully every process that goes into the manufacture of his car.

He's still the simple farmer boy he was more than 50 years ago, when he was bound out on a farm, while he attended school. Born on a farm near De Kalb, Ill., in 1864, he was moved with his family to another farm near Flint, Mich., when he was 2. At 7 he started to earn his own money as a farm hand, while going to school.

Farm work and schooling continued until at 28 Nash went out on his own. He got a job as trimmer with the Flint Road Cart Company which later became the Durant-Dort Carriage Company. He earned a dollar a day.

But J. Dallas Dort, one of the pioneers in automotive history, was attracted to his work and Nash began to move upward. He became general manager in a few years and gave the company its most prosperous years as his head.

In 1919, when the automotive industry was feeling the general industrial depression, Nash was picked to get Buick out of the mire. He started with a revolutionary step—developing the six-cylinder motor.

That, with his managerial genius, saved Buick for the future and Nash was ready for bigger things.

In 1912, he became president and general manager of General Motors, made Chrysler head of Buick and steered that organization upon a course that has led to world-wide success.

BUILDS UP OWN PRODUCT

But Nash wasn't satisfied until he has his own product. In 1916, he organized the Nash Motors Company on the basis of what remained of the old Thomas B. Jeffrey Company at Kenosha.

In the 12 years of its existence, Nash has made his company one of the soundest in the automobile world. In his annual report to Nash stockholders last November, Nash reported net profits of nearly $23,000,000, nearly $14,000,000 paid out in dividends and a balance on hand of more than $42,000,000.

The secret of this great achievement is Nash's uncanny manufacturing and merchandising methods, his lieutenants say. He doesn't like to see capital lying idle. He is hostile to waste and lost time or money.

He cut down the inventory of the old Buick company when he was its head, and has stuck to this practice of maintaining as rapid a turnover of his goods as could possibly be practicable. The result is he is never "stuck" with a large inventory when he has to change his models suddenly in order to keep up with the times.

POPULAR WITH EVERYONE

Outside of this careful, close contact with the business, however, Nash believes "Charlie" to everyone, his office assistants, his veteran workers in the factory and his host of friends. It reveals his humanness and his good nature.

"I'm the most common cuss that lives," he comments. His great success, his riches haven't turned his head. He still likes to wander through the factory and chat with gray-haired men who used to work alongside him in the old Dort plant. He revels in the companionship of the hurt, for he is a great big-game hunter and an expert fisherman.

Well-built, robust and healthy, this man of 64 looks ten years younger. His fishing and hunting exploits keep him young. And his outlook on life contributes to his youthfulness.

"I can't draw any line of demarcation between some fellow who hasn't got a dollar to his name and someone who has $20,000,000," he says. "How I hate to measure a man's success in life by the dollar sign!"

And he goes on "I belong to the common people, and I'm proud I do. I'm proud that some of my workmen call me by my first name."

BIG GAME HUNTER

Sitting beside him and hearing him talk like this you instinctively feel his sincerity. He doesn't like to discuss his recent gift of $300,000 to the Kenosha Y. M. C. A. toward the construction of a new building, nor his many philanthropies. He doesn't like to talk business.

"I'm enjoying this chat with you more than I will the next interview. I'll have when some banker is to see me," he says frankly.

In the same mood, he likes to talk of his lodge in the north woods of Wisconsin and his many fishing and hunting expeditions into Canada and over the United States.

"I never played until I was 45," he says. "But ever then I have done all kinds of fishing except salmon fishing. I've gone after big game and shot ducks and geese. I like to get into an old flannel shirt and khaki pants, pull up a pair of waders and go out into the streams."

And wherever he goes, whether for business or pleasure, Mrs. Nash is his close companion. She's his advisor in many business ventures and he wor-

BERLIN "HOT DOG" SELLERS ORGANIZE

Form Association Known as Nocturnal Sausage Vendors
With Many Members

Berlin (AP)—Berlin's "hot dog" peddlers have formed the "Association of Organized Nocturnal Sausage Vendors" to force the police to let them sell their round delicacies throughout the wee hours of Sunday morning. Far from being a trivial joke, this matter has become a problem of far-reaching significance for the sellers of hot dogs, and even more so for the thousands of folk abroad at night, coming off night duty with a craving to get on the outside of something substantial as they run.

Daily as the hour of 1 a. m. with the concomitant closing of cafes and bars draws near, legions of white-aproned and white-capped purveyors of hot sausages may be seen hurrying in all directions to reach their respective points of business advantage, each with a brightly polished brass or nickel combination stove and casserole emanating strong, savory odors strapped to his hip.

But at no time are these night dealers in "Frankfurters" called "Wurst-maxe" in the Berlin vernacular—in such demand as during the night from Saturday to Sunday, when after 1 a. m. the police are adamant in chivying them off the streets because of the Sabbath regulations forbidding the sale of all edibles.

The Sunday regulation may be all ships her. Their three daughters are married so Nash has found further enjoyment in the companionship of his four grandchildren.

'SLUMP IN TOURISTS GENERAL IN STATE, OBSERVERS REPORT

"There aren't any," was Alderman Mark Catlin's comment Friday on tourists in northern Wisconsin. He also added that few tourists were to be found on the northern highways indicating they have not come to this section of the country or are not traveling at all. Mr. Catlin recently returned from a week in the northern part of the state.

"We still have our regular quota of overnight campers at the 'great camp,' Earl Lutz, care-taking, said recently, "but most of them are Chicago people who come on their first trip. They report there are few people on the roads this year."

SPORTS NEWS OF NEENAH AND MENASHA SOCIETY

LESS THAN 24 HOURS
SEPARATES DEATH OF
NEENAH BROTHERS

Didrick W. and George O. Bergstrom Had Lived at Neenah for 77 Years

Neenah—Less than 24 hours separates the deaths, Saturday and Sunday nights of Didrick W. and George O. Bergstrom, brothers, who for more than three quarters of a century have been identified with the civic and business affairs of this city.

Didrick W. Bergstrom, 81, a resident of Neenah for the last 77 years, died shortly after 10 o'clock Sunday night at his home on Church-st., following a prolonged illness. He was born Aug. 7, 1847, in Norway, coming in 1851, with his father and brother, George, to America on a sailing vessel. They came almost directly to Neenah, and within a few days they passed through the pioneer days. The first house, when they arrived here, was on the edge of the virgin forest. As a boy Mr. Bergstrom worked in the Wooden Ware plant at Menasha and later in the old stove factory at Neenah, later hiring out as a clerk in the Kimberly and Babcock. He was a good storekeeper, in which he later became a partner.

In 1878 the Bergstrom Stove Foundry company was organized with Mr. Bergstrom, his brother and Havilah Babcock as partners. This continued until 1904 when the Bergstrom company was organized with which he has been connected until the present time. Mr. Bergstrom had been a director of First National bank for the last 35 years and at the time of his death was a president of the city cemetery commission. He was greatly interested in enlarging and beautifying Oak Hill cemetery and a few years ago presented the city with the beautiful chapel from which his funeral will be conducted at 10:30 Tuesday morning.

As a young man he united with the Presbyterian church, was a worker in the Sunday school of which he was superintendent for 27 years and served as elder of the church for the last 40 years. The Rev. D. C. Jones will have charge of the funeral services.

Surviving are the widow, four sons and a daughter, John, Willis, Walter, and Nathan Bergstrom, all Neenah; Mrs. Mary MacQuarrie, Minneapolis. There also is a sister, Mrs. E. E. Beckwith of Tecoma, Wash., and six grandchildren.

George O. Bergstrom, 79, also a resident of Neenah for the last 77 years, died suddenly at 11 o'clock Saturday night following a heart attack at his home at the Valley Inn where he and Mrs. Bergstrom had resided for the last five years. He was in seemingly good health during the early evening hours Saturday, and retired to his apartment at his usual time. The report of his sudden death was a great surprise to the community.

He was born March 16, 1849, in Norway. When a young man he engaged in the plow works which led to engaging in the foundry business and continued as head of the Bergstrom Stove Works up to a year ago when he retired from actual business. He had served the city as mayor in 1890, again in 1896 and the last time in 1897. At the time of his death he was a director of First National Bank.

Surviving are the widow and two sons, Edwin and George, both Neenah, and James A. Bergstrom, Minneapolis.

The body will lie in state from 1:30 until 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the F. J. Sensesbrenner home on E. Wisconsin-ave where a private funeral will be held at 4 o'clock with burial at Oak Hill cemetery. The services will be conducted by the Rev. D. C. Jones, pastor of First Presbyterian church.

TRUCK BLOCKING TRACK CAUSES TRAIN TO STOP

Neenah—One of the city's large working trucks becoming stalled in the tracks at the Soo line Lake-st. crossing Saturday afternoon, was cause for the Mountain line, Chicago to the coast train, to make its first stop at Neenah. The wheels had become caught between the planking and the rails of the crossing in such a manner that all efforts to loosen it were fruitless.

Time for the fast train was approaching and workmen hastened up the tracks a mile and attracted the engineer's attention as the heavy train came rushing along, just in time to stop within a few feet of the truck. With the aid of the train engine, the truck was slowly pushed out of its perilous position and the train went on toward Chicago.

AUTO ON FIRE

Neenah—The fire department was summoned Sunday afternoon to W. N. Water-st. where the automobile owned by Peter Osker, had caught fire. The blaze was extinguished with a chemical before any damage resulted.

KIWANIS CLUB TO MEET WITH SCOUTS

Fortune Deserts Governor's Daughters;
Living In Poverty On A Deserted Barge

Isobel Stone, daughter of a former governor, is shown at the left holding one of the opera scores she is practicing. Upper right is the ramshackle barge in which she and her sister live. Below is Isobel with some of the pieces of her sister's sculpture.

New York—Isobel and Margaret Stone have known the luxury and social prestige that comes with being the daughters of a governor. They have known wealth, for upon the death of the late William A. Stone, once chief executive of the state of Pennsylvania, the two girls inherited nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

Isobel Stone has known independent success, too, for she has sung in opera and has appeared on the musical comedy stage.

Today, Isobel and Margaret have only memories, but with ambition undimmed. They exist in poverty on a discarded and rotting river barge. It wouldn't even float were it not jammed in the mud of stagnant Sherman Creek, near the Dykeman street landing in New York.

"No," Isobel insisted, gamely, "it isn't because we love the great outdoors, or are being eccentric. It's because we got this old moss-covered barge rent free—and when you haven't anything in your pocketbook, that's a big consideration."

"You see, my sister and I didn't run true to form. We both love art and have aspired to artistic careers. We haven't asked our rich relatives for help. So we will have to find our own way out of our poverty."

Isobel determined to make a name for herself on Broadway. Margaret, the sister, who was married some years ago to Richard R. O'Neill and later separated from him, has fitted up the old cabin to resemble a studio, where she models all day long.

"If I had my life to live over, I'd prefer to have to struggle from my early years and then possibly by now, I would be self-reliant enough to hold my own on Broadway," Isobel went on.

"I'm convinced that you have to be hard boiled today to make your mark. If women are dangerously so, it is not from choice but from necessity. French, riding, music, art and travel are all very well for drawing room life, but a career and the ability to give as good as is sent."

In appearance, Isobel is what most people would call "arty." Her extraordinary, lovely red-gold hair, her best features, is cut in a Greenwich Village, up one side and down on the other and she wears one heavy, old silver earring. Tall, slim and graceful, she doubtless would wear clothes stunningly, though she admits that now her wardrobe is not dictated so much by her taste as by her finances.

At best, the barge is a dismal looking, ramshackle affair, outside as well as in. The furniture was left behind as not being worth moving. The kitchen stove was partially concealed and its original purpose blocked by a yellow cover. Opera scores, musical books and writing pads indicated it now was doubling as a work table.

The only suggestion of beauty was a green Spanish shawl draped over an ugly mission stool—one her mother had purchased years ago in Madrid.

When ex-Governor Stone died, eighty years ago, he left an estate valued at $200,000 besides an $85,000 life insurance policy. Through litigation and unfortunate investments, this evaporated until there is nothing left.

"Naturally, opera is my goal," said Isobel. "But just a good singing job that pays a little money would be welcome. As a matter of fact, I made my first attempt at singing when I was ten."

Trinity Lutheran church choir held its annual outdoor Sunday at the Kuehl cottage at Lake Poygan where the day was spent in a social manner with games, music and a picnic dinner at noon.

The first annual outdoor given by the Neenah-Society club, was held Sunday at Lake Poygan at which more than 500 people including members of the local organization and from Hortonville and their families. The day was spent in all kinds of sports, including baseball games, athletic contests, races, motorboat races and car races, to which the winners received prizes in merchandise. A catered dinner was served at noon. So successful was this first gathering that the club has decided to make it an annual event.

The Gustave Kofa family held a dinner Sunday at the Poinsettia luncheon room at G. J. Kofa's corner in honor of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Kalfahs. Covers were laid for 12. Following the dinner, the time was spent in a social manner.

Princeton loses in eleventh frame.

Neenah—The Princeton baseball team of which Ed Haase, Fred Nixon, William H. Miller and George Madison of Neenah, were members, was defeated Sunday afternoon in a game with N. Fond du Lac, 6 and 5 the game going 11 innings.

Neenah—Hoiger Christensen, Sherburne, brakeman on the Soo line switch engine, fell from the top of one of the freight cars Saturday night and into the water below as the train was passing over one of the Y bridges west of the passenger depot. His cries attracted other trainmen, who, after much trouble extracted him from the muck and dirt into which he had sunk up to his waist. In falling, Christensen in some manner injured the side of his face and was taken to Theda Clark hospital for treatment.

Jersild's loss.

Neenah—The Jersild Knitting company baseball team went to De Pere Saturday afternoon and lost the reformatory team, 12 to 4.

debut as a singer in Aphrodite, seven years ago. Later I sang with the San Carlo company. I've had parts in several musical comedies and understood some of the biggest stars. But I had a run of bad luck—ill health and that sort of thing—and I have been learning a lot about the reverse side of success.

"During the last three months I've sung at night clubs, under an assumed name, that I wouldn't think of entering as Isobel Stone. I've had to face all the ugliness that as a rich girl I would have been carefully shielded from."

Isobel is a fancy rider, having been a pupil of the famous Max Oser, in Switzerland. She was captain of her basketball team at the Pennsylvania College for Women and is an all-round athlete.

"But what's the good of all this, if I can't get a job?" she queried. "You can take it from me that the way from the governor's mansion to the star's dressing room is a long, hard road."

Menasha—Alex Dombroski, who was awarded the contract for moving the former gymnasium building of Menasha Printing & Carton company, purchased by R. L. Fankratz, from its former location on the bank of the government canal at the north end of Tayco-st bridge to a vacant lot opposite Mr. Fankratz's office on Kaukauna-st, has just completed one of the most difficult tasks of its kind ever attempted in Menasha. The structure stood on a high foundation with the canal on one side a narrow street on the other and with Highway 41 in front of it and the work of building up a runway and getting heavy trucks under it required nearly a week.

The detouring of traffic on Highway 41 was not permitted by Mayor Held until after 6 o'clock evening, making it necessary to cut a portion of the moving at night. After leaving the concrete pavement on Tayco-st for Kaukauna-st, the weight of the building, which was estimated at 100 tons, caused the trucks to sink into the street to such an extent that planks had to be used the remainder of the distance. Owing to the height of the structure, many electric and telephone wires along the route had to be cut. The building was removed to make room for the new Tayco-st bridge. The first floor will be converted into offices and the second floor into flats.

Jensen in the crew. The boats and crews will leave Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning for the racing place.

Neenah—Chris Grunski, Ellen-ave, was painfully but not seriously injured Sunday afternoon, when a bullet fired at targets at the Co. I rifle range, glanced off the backstop, struck him in the neck, inflicting a severe laceration which required several stitches to close. Mr. Grunski, together with other marksmen, went to the range to practice and it was while firing at long distance the accident occurred.

By Milton C. Work

As a result of the almost entire disuse of doubles—original bids of one, as was described last Monday, the information double was invented and Auction Bridge was made much more interesting. All doubles were divided into "business" and "informational" the business doubles retain the literal and obvious meaning which originally attached to all doubles, the informational doubles became purely conventional and their meanings had to be learned.

After considerable experimenting, an almost unanimous agreement was reached by the experts that a double of two No Trumps, or four of a suit should be considered business; and that doubles of one No Trump, or one, two or three of a suit should be business or informational, depending (with certain variations) upon two other features of the auction. These features have to do with the previous declarations of the doubler and his partner and may be summarized as follows:

A bid or double previously made by a player makes an; double by his partner business; but a bid or double previously made by the doubler does not necessarily have that effect. The logic of this lies in the fact that an informational double is made with the expectation that partners will name his best suit in answer to it. When he already has indicated his strong suit, it does not have to be asked for. But a player may have bid himself, have been overcalled by an adversary and may want to show his partner to select from three suits (the one he bid has bid and the two unbid suits); so in that case the double may be classed as informational even after a bid by the doubler.

For practical purposes, the following definitions cover doubling: A double is informational if made of one No Trump, or of one, two or three of a suit provided the part or of the doubler has not previously bid or doubled.

A double is business if made of two or more No Trumps, or four of a suit; or of any smaller declaration if the part or of the doubler has previously bid or doubled.

There is another requirement, so comparatively unimportant that I have not complicated the definition by including it. A double must be made at the first opportunity to double that declaration in order that it be considered informational.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED VIRGINIA BREWSTER, after leaving both father and wealth, comes to make her home with CLARISSA DEAN and her father. Her fiance, NATHANIEL DANN, objects to this for he mistrusts DEAN'S motives.

Meanwhile, DEAN plots to get NIEL away from VIRGINIA but fails, and later is forced to pay blackmail to a MRS. FARLEY or face a scandal.

CLARISSA becomes jealous of her and VIRGINIA resolves to go, but DEAN insists that she marry him. When she refuses, he threatens to reveal the fact that her father cheated him out of $100,000 in a bootlegging deal. Recklessly, she promises to earn enough to repay him in one year—or marry him.

VIRGINIA leaves but has to pawn a ring to tide over until she can find a position. She goes to NIEL's studio to tell him her story, but her joy at seeing him is clouded because she dare not reveal the compact with DEAN and also because of the familiarity with which his model, CHIRL, treats NIEL.

She goes to an employment agency seeking work and is sent out to a prospective position but finds it impossible. While returning to her hotel she notices a man who appears to be following her. Arriving, she is angered to find orchids from DEAN and wonders how he learned her address.

NIEL takes her out to dine and urges her to accept financial assistance from him even if she will not marry him immediately. Coming from the restaurant, she sees the man who had followed her standing in a shadowed doorway.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVIII

Virginia was not sure she recognized the man, but there was something vaguely familiar about him—a familiarity that disturbed her until she fell asleep that night.

"Where have I seen him before?" she asked herself countless times; and the very fact that she neither could place him nor satisfy herself why the matter should trouble her at all made it impossible to dismiss him from her mind.

The next morning her thoughts were taken up with plans for getting a position and the man's haunting presence there on the East Side did not return to puzzle further.

First she read the help-wanted columns of the newspaper that came up with her breakfast. There was nothing worth trying for. Nothing, that is, nothing that she had any chance of getting. Nevertheless her spirits were up. It was a new day, ever a matter of promise to youth.

There was Oliver to see. And Miss Evans. There must be many places where she could be useful if only she could find them!

Virginia bathed and dressed without pining for lost luxuries, in fact without thinking at all of the limitations of her present bathing facilities.

As soon as she thought Oliver would be in his office she took a subway train down to Wall Street. He was not in but Miss Evans said she expected him soon, so Virginia decided to wait.

About half an hour he arrived, coming in hurriedly and stopping for a few brief words with his secretary before going on to his private office. He had not seen Virginia, but as soon as he had gone on Miss Evans came over to where she sat by a window and told her he wanted to give some dictation immediately but that very probably he would see her directly afterwards.

Virginia signified her willingness to wait. Miss Evans started toward her desk, appeared to change her mind and stopped, facing Virginia again. "I'm afraid Mr. Cutter is upset this morning," she said uneasily. "Don't you think you could come back later in the day?"

"I'd rather wait," Virginia returned promptly.

The secretary frowned, seemed about to speak, but nodded her head instead and hurriedly gathered up her pencil and notebook to answer the insistent call of the buzzer from Mr. Cutter's office.

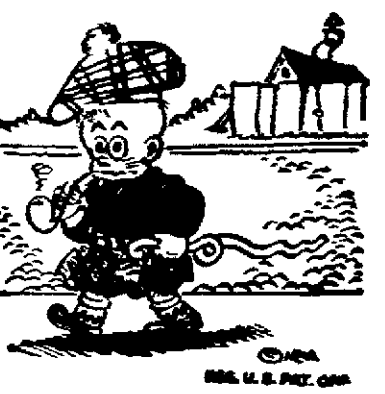

In five minutes she was back, flushed and angry looking. Virginia stood and Miss Evans said: "You may go in now," and turned at once to her work.

Virginia wondered at her abruptness but she was too anxious to hear what Oliver might have to say about her investment to stop and ask any questions, though she felt there was something Miss Evans had wanted to say to her.

When she opened Oliver's door she saw him coming across the room from a door on the opposite side with a as might happen in the moods of pre-occupation that came upon her lately. "Will you lunch with me again to-day?" she invited pleasantly and was further troubled to see Miss Evans' lips draw together in a thin line and hear her answer, "I'm very sorry, Miss Brewster, I've another engagement."

"Some other time," Virginia suggested to conceal the fact that she was slightly offended. Later, lunching alone, she smiled a little ruefully over Miss Evans' refusal to join her. Plainly the "other engagement" had been merely an excuse. What a change a few short weeks had wrought in her life! Here was a woman as remote from her in the past as the earth from the sun insofar as social relations were concerned, actually refusing to lunch with her! Virginia admitted the humor of it but not without a little pang of regret.

"Perhaps Oliver was in an ill humor with her," she reflected, genuinely bothered about Miss Evans' strange conduct. "I'm sure I did nothing to offend her."

She was disappointed at losing an opportunity to talk again with a sensible person who had been in accord with her views. Nathaniel would naturally expect, if she had sufficient money to pay her expenses, that she would take her time about living up to her new-found ideals and wait until some choice position came her way before taking one. She dared not tell him how urgent it was for her to find employment and if he wondered at whatever she might finally do she would have to pretend that ambition did not count. Only the fact that she was doing something matter, she would tell him.

Yes, but what was that something going to be? She could go back to Mrs. Phelps? Telephoning would save time. And she must look up other ways.

When she reached Mrs. Phelps by telephone she was asked if she would not come in as soon as convenient. That afternoon? Yes, if she could. Virginia went up directly, by subway. It was one of the very few times in her life that she had ridden in the underground trains and she found it exceedingly distasteful. Unsavory individuals stared at her pointedly, giving particular attention to the fashionable brevity of her skirts. There was more crowding, too, than when she had come downtown, and although she had a seat her feet were trodden upon and one lurching passenger barely escaped being deposited in her lap when the long train jolted to a stop.

Virginia was decidedly relieved to come up to the street level again, and the days when she had complained of the traffic congestion on Fifth Avenue came back to her now as blissfully free of any real contact with transportation problems.

Then, if caught in the vortex of New York's population, she could at least sit in recent isolation in a comfortable motor car until her way was cleared. Today she had been compelled to shoulder her path in and out of a subway train against the opposition

APPLETON OSTEOPATH GOING TO CONVENTION

Dr. Eliza M. Culbertson will represent Appleton osteopaths at the thirteenth annual convention of the American Osteopathic Society of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology at Kirksville, Mo., Aug. 1 to 4. The society is one of several affiliated with the American Osteopathic Association which is to hold its convention at Kirksville a week later.

The American Osteopathic Society includes not only osteopathic physicians specializing in diseases of eyes, ears, nose and throat, but also many general practitioners who must examine those organs. A thorough diagnosis will be emphasized throughout the program and a thorough examination will be given each patient visiting the clinic. Most of the patients will come from Illinois, Iowa and Missouri.

of straphangers who, it seemed, thought nothing of a little buffeting and elbowing. She felt sure she must be littered with black and blue spots. But there was the hope of finding a position at Mrs. Phelps' to buoy her up and lessen her discomfort.

She was doomed to disappointment once more that day, however, for it soon became apparent that all Mrs. Phelps desired was to have a little motherly talk with her. Virginia could not understand her attitude at all and, frankness being native to her, when fact did not prohibit, she asked with direct simplicity, "Why are you trying to discourage me from seeking work, Mrs. Phelps?"

Your Question And Its Answer

J. A. Panneck, D.C.

PALMER CHIROPRACTOR

Question: I am a sufferer with high blood pressure. My doctor tells me it is 180. Have been under his care for six months with no results. I feel quite dizzy at times. What is your opinion of my case? Will Chiropractic Adjustments help me? What is the cause of my blood pressure? No one has ever told me, can you? —W. L. M.

ANSWER: High blood pressure indicates a stiffening of the artery walls. To move the blood through the veins the heart must labor harder to overcome the resistance of narrowed arteries, hence the pressure. The intermediate cause is faulty kidney action, resulting in a salty deposit in the artery walls, which causes the stiffening.

The basic cause is faulty reflex action in those nerves innervating the kidneys and this is usually the result of spinal interference with these nerves.

In such a case, the Chiropractor, by restoring normal alignment of the spine can remove the cause and the normal action of nature will work to reduce the blood pressure.

QUESTION: I am a man of forty years. Doctors tell me I am suffering with Neuritis, and in a few days I shall be sixty. I have had thirty-eight years of age after a few years of youth. We have been married for three years and in our family life, with no results.

Will your Adjustments help me? Please answer—R. M.

ANSWER: True neuritis is a form of gradual and very painful destruction of nerve cells. If it progresses to the point where nerve cells are destroyed then we have a form of weakness that is like paralysis. Neuritis is caused by a local pressure on spinal nerves interfering with normal action of the heat function. Rheumatism is due to faulty elimination, principally of the kidneys. Both conditions are reached through adjustments more quickly than any other way for both of these conditions have their cause at the spine. I would advise you to consult your Chiropractor.

FRIENDS OF LABOR

The best avenue for advancement of the labor cause is through friendly understanding and fairness of employers. It is by bringing capital and labor into a relationship that is just and profitable alike to both. This means a recognition of the part labor plays in production and in the success of enterprise. Better progress is made in these directions by education and cooperation than by force. Political action is of little avail. Legislative measures are largely protective. They do not make higher wages and greater returns to labor. If political action were the thing that put labor ahead, we should long ago have had a labor party in the United States. The American Federation of Labor has always recognized the fallacy of such an assumption, and under this policy of restraint labor has made greater strides in America than anywhere else in the world.

Labor today has many friends in the industrial, business and financial world. It has gained the regard and goodwill of many outstanding employers, who have demonstrated in a concrete way their desire not only to be fair but to serve and assist it. When it meets with men of this type and caliber it pays to tie up with them and to do its full part toward maintaining this mutually beneficial relationship. It is the road to increased incomes, better homes and a freer and larger life. Politicians do not produce these results. In too many cases they generate only resistance and antagonism on the part of both employers and employees. Their agitation is generally based on the doctrine of class conflict, prejudice and force. They do not think deeply or soberly. They are superficial, emotional or crafty. They do not serve labor half so well as the friendly employer or as appreciative capital.

If it is good for labor to reciprocate advances by employers and to cultivate a manifestation of good will by them in industry and business, it would seem to be equally logical to do the same in public affairs and government. Employers who have proved their interest in labor by promoting its betterment and welfare ought to make the best public officials from the labor standpoint when they can be induced to accept office. If they are fair and right with labor in a private capacity they will be fair and right with it in a public capacity. If they cooperate with and serve it in industry they will do the same in executive or legislative offices. It seems to us these are the very men labor ought to welcome into the field of politics. It is gaining influence and assistance where they count for something.

George W. Mead of Wisconsin Rapids, who is a candidate for United States senator, and Walter J. Kohler of Kohler, who is a candidate for governor, are essentially men of this type. Their employes are for them 100 per cent. Their record with and for labor is made up over a long period of years. Unless labor is more shortsighted than we believe it is, it will see in the willingness of these men to accept the burdens and responsibilities of public office an opportunity to serve its interests that does not always present itself.

"BOLONEY" PICTURES

It begins to appear that this presidential campaign is going to be relatively free from bunk, as far as the two leading candidates are concerned.

First Al Smith refused to pose for pictures as a bricklayer. He based his refusal on the simple ground that everyone knows he isn't a bricklayer, and that a picture of him posing as one would be "boloney."

And now Herbert Hoover has refused to let photographers snap him kissing a baby. He doesn't propose to go about the country kissing babies, and he won't have the cameramen talk him into it.

That's simply fine, in both cases. If only the subordinates of the two candidates can be as level-headed throughout the campaign, we may get somewhere.

INTERPRETING ARTICLE X.

The question has been raised by our "war thinkers" as to what effect the Kellogg treaty might have upon an attempt at union between Germany and Austria, in defiance of the League of Nations provision which requires the consent of France, Great Britain and Italy to such merger. While the secretary of state does not directly speculate upon this interesting question, which would involve the right of the allies to invade and engage in hostilities against Germany and Austria, he has this to say of the covenant of the League of Nations and the famous article 10:

The covenant of the League of Nations imposes no unilateral obligation to go to war. The obligation, if any, is secondary and attaches only when deliberately accepted by a state.

Article 10 of the covenant, for example, has been interpreted by a resolution submitted to the fourth assembly, but not formally adopted owing to one adverse vote, to mean that "it is for the constitutional authorities of each member to decide, in reference to the obligation of preserving the independence and the integrity of territory of members, in what degree the member is bound to assure the execution of this obligation by employment of its military forces."

There is, in my opinion, no necessary inconsistency between the covenant and the idea of an unequalled renunciation of war. The covenant can, if true, be construed as authorizing war in certain circumstances, but it is an authorization and not a positive requirement. This declaration is from the second most important executive in a Republican administration. It fully and emphatically repudiates the position of the Republican party in the national elections of both 1920 and 1924. In these elections the Republican party held that article 10 automatically bound the United States to take up arms in defense of any signatory whose independence or territorial entity was threatened. We listened to harrowing tales by Republican orators of American soldiers being drafted for military service in Europe. We were going to have to fight the battles of France, Germany, England and what-not. The ringing cry of Harding and the politicians who betrayed both him and the party was that by subscribing to Article 10 we would be destroying our independence and yielding our sovereignty to the councils of war-minded Europe.

Eight years later we have a Republican secretary of state who denounces this theory in its entirety, and who says that signatories under Article 10 have complete freedom of action, both morally and legally, in determining the extent if any to which they shall move against those who break the peace. "There is no affirmative primary obligation to go to war," he says. It is a complete reversal of the Republican position of 1920 and of 1924. Mr. Kellogg interprets Article 10 correctly and honestly just as did Mr. Root and Mr. Hughes and Mr. Taft at the time American membership in the league was up for consideration, and to whose statesmanship the party turned a deaf ear.

Mr. Kellogg coincides entirely with Woodrow Wilson's conception of the obligations created by Article 10. In fact, Mr. Kellogg goes so far as to say that in his opinion there is no inconsistency between the covenant of the League and the "idea of an unequalled renunciation of war." The full importance of this declaration will not be lost upon those either opposed to or in favor of the League of Nations.

All of which illustrates the simple fact that truth prevails in time, and that it cannot be forever mangled and distorted by irresponsible and untrustworthy politicians.

THE SODA FOUNTAIN

And now the soda fountain, once the despair of dietitians and health authorities, comes in for a pat on the back.

Writing in the current issue of Good Housekeeping, Dr. Walter H. Eddy, of Columbia University, says that the soda fountain is now an asset to the national health, whereas a few years ago it was considered a detriment.

The reason? We are learning what to drink. Fountain sales show an increasing consumption of pure fruit juice and milk drinks in place of the artificially flavored, more or less mysterious concoctions of a generation ago. The change is good for us. It is helping to balance our diet.

AN OUTLINE OF HYGIENE

No. 46—Health Hazards in the Air

Not every schoolboy knows that neither malaria nor any other pestilence is carried in or by the air, nor is a swampy region. Even in schools where a farcical course in "health" is given the average untrained teacher assigned to give the "health" instruction still cherishes myths and bugaboos about the air and climate.

So far as our scientific knowledge goes, there is not the slightest reason to imagine that any disease is ever carried in or by the air, aside from droplet or spray infection as described in a previous chapter. If your next door neighbor has diphtheria, scarlet fever, smallpox, tuberculosis, or a hospital for these infectious diseases, you are in no danger whatever so long as you can keep out of range of the patient's 12 feet. A wall of air 12 feet or more in thickness is an absolutely impassable barrier for any known disease germs or virus, though of course it would not keep kids, cats, cooties or convalescents from bringing you samples of the disease.

Actual health hazards in the air are foul odors, chemical contamination from industrial plants, smoke, dusts and nowadays most important of all carbon monoxide gas.

Even the most disagreeable odor is not of itself harmful but through association certain foul odors are esthetically repugnant and the public health ordinances rightly classify conditions giving rise to such odors as nuisances. For instance a creek or stream flowing through a city and receiving sewage, garbage and other refuse and emptying it into the city's largest public park. The noxious stench the water gives off in the summer is in itself absolutely harmless to public health though unquestionably nauseating to all who are unfortunately residents or visitors in the vicinity, and it is by no means stomach for both the fat and lean to have their stomachs turned as often as they venture out for a breath of air.

It is rather regrettable that many public health ordinances still deal with the disposal of carcasses of dead animals, for this is a police matter and in no way concerns public health, though the sanitary regulations governing the disposal of such "nuisances" gives moral encouragement to the popular notion that there is danger to health from bad odors.

"Sewer gas," formerly a dreaded bugaboo, is no longer feared by anyone with an elementary knowledge of hygiene. Leakage or escape of such gases into the air of a house is unpleasant but not a menace to anybody's health. Occasionally a workman is asphyxiated in a manhole or sewer, whether from leakage of illuminating gas mains, gasoline from garages, or cleaning establishments, or gases from spent liquors of chemical works. Ordinary "sewer gas" is carbon dioxide and perhaps some methane (marsh gas) both of which are harmless to breathe, diluted with air.

Often the air in the neighborhood of an industrial plant is so heavily contaminated with "banana oil," amyl acetate or other chemical solvent, the persons passing in the street may actually get headache or nausea from the stuff. The air in and about the place where much painting, enameling and lacquering or gilding is done is likely to be polluted with various odorous fumes which are quite poisonous. All such shops should be required to have ample air space around them and ventilation to prevent concentration of the injurious fumes in the air.

The most deadly contamination of the air is that with carbon monoxide, which is odorless.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Details Are Medical

In the treatment of varicose veins by the injection of a serum, what are the subsequent reactions? What is the nature of the serum? Please give me the name and address of the doctor or clinic you referred to in your article about this new method.

(Mrs. S. H. J.)

Answer: I have all the information I can give, in the article. It is not a serum, but simply medicines injected into the vein. Any good physician can give the treatment in his office or in the patient's home. The technical details are available to all physicians. The effect is obliteration of the varicose vein. I advise you to avoid "clinics," "institutes" and the like, and consult only a reputable physician who practices under his own name.

A friend of mine aged 59 years walked a distance of about 30 miles the other day. The following day she spent in bed. I said her exhaustion was the result of the long walk, but she insists it is just "nervousness." We would like to hear your view. (Mrs. C. M. W.)

Answer: It is a mean saunter even for a trained hiker. A lot of younger women would go to bed for a week if compelled to walk half as far. However, let's not quarrel with your friend about her "nerves." She will have her little ally.

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

PAXTON HIBBEN ON W. J. B.

If you keep fairly close watch on what is going on in the publishing world you can frequently enjoy a book before it is published or even long before it is written. It happens now and again that some little book note is tucked away in a magazine which gives you a glow all over because you revel in a book that will not make its appearance for several years perhaps.

Such is the case for instance with Paxton Hibben and his "Life of William Jennings Bryan." I can think of few things that will give those readers who know both Hibben and Bryan more pure joy than the mere announcement that this biographer is going to write this particular book.

The information came to me in an innocent little "Public Pulse" letter that Hibben wrote to one of the literary weeklies. It did not contain more than five or six lines and was merely a request for letters and other documents that would assist him in writing the life of Bryan. Hibben showed some shrewdness in writing his request. Evidently he does not wish to scare off the fanatical worshippers of the Commoner and hopes to lure from them many a letter that would be of great value to him.

What kind of a person is this who would write a book about a man who has been so widely known and so widely loved? It is just this kind of material that will be of greatest value to Hibben and so he wants to get his hands on as much of it as he can. His letter was so worded that no one who had not read Hibben's "Henry Ward Beecher" would have any suspicions.

I do not know for certain of course that Hibben will treat Bryan the way he treated Beecher but I would be willing to place a fairly good bet that such is the case. The mere fact that he chose Bryan as a subject almost proves this. With a hundred possible subjects to choose from, a writer does not pick one at random. He chooses the character who will yield best to his particular method or his particular slant on life.

Now Bryan is in many ways to the generation just past what Henry Ward Beecher was to the one of the Civil War. Both had a tremendous popular following. Both put their faith in emotion rather than in intellect. Both were possessed of voices that charmed millions. Both lived in the public eye every minute of their adult lives. Both had followings who were fanatical in their worship, and both also roused an opposition that despised them.

What Hibben did in the case of Beecher was to take a man whom the formal biographers had whitewashed and strip him naked. Some of course claim that he was unfair in this while others have hailed the book as the first really honest pronouncement about the great preacher. "It isn't necessary to decide here which faction is correct. We are concerned only with what is likely to happen with the biography of Bryan."

So far the lives of the Commoner have been for the most part respectful. The book by Bryan's wife may be eliminated from consideration for it is hardly reasonable to expect an unbiased book about a great man by one so near to him. It has no value as biography. It is merely a record of more or less obvious facts mixed with considerable eulogy.

The other books about him that have so far appeared have mostly been by good party men to whom Bryan was almost a religion. It cannot be said in fact that there has yet appeared a real biography of Bryan—a genuine critical study of the man by one who cares nothing about party labels.

Hibben is likely to provide such a book. The chances are it will be hostile to the Commoner, but it will not be commonplace. If it is anything like the "Henry Ward Beecher" it will be a joy to read no matter where it leaves Bryan in the end.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Davis

New York—Upon a sultry night in mid-July, Manhattan reveals some of its most kaleidoscopic phases.

On such a night, the black bars that fall away to the Hudson from Riverside Drive come to know all of man's burdens and all of man's releases from burden.

At 157th Street, the gay lights of Palisades Park, across the river, flash with the hundreds of youngsters who flaunt their inclination to be gay. Across the river the dips and bends of a roller-coaster are outlined in light, like some huge incandescent serpent and the half-haze catches the electric glare and magnifies it into a blazing sun. Along the wall stand youth and maid, youth and maid, maid and maid, youth and youth, in a seemingly endless line, their eyes fastened now upon the transient gold of passing boats and upon the blaze of light against the sky. Just below, the Palisades ferry comes and goes as the youngsters are captured by the park's allure.

Upon the grassy hill tired men, men stretched prone, relaxing from the day's burden. The grass has been cooled and moistened by the river's mist. Men brush their faces against the refreshing wet grass-blades. They smell at the ground, like animals kept over-long in a barn. Men do not often smell the earth in Manhattan. The ferry whistles toot. Tug, slip, sloop and skid along the river like so many illuminated water bugs. Hushed whispers come from the pathways: "Who will the next Wrigley?" and over in the damp grass and a snappy siren chortles: "Aw, don't be a piker Jim! let's go over to the Palisades." Two youths begin to fight. A small crowd gathers. Automobiles dash along the drive. A traffic light flashes on. Night hides the river from view. Only the bobbing lights of boats tell of its presence.

Upon a sultry night in mid-July, the Russians of the up-town ghetto begin their trek toward the symphony stadium. Tonight their precious symphony will be given. They plod in groups and in single file, if they are to have 25 cents for a high perched seat, they cannot afford the luxury of a street car. And so they walk. They take off their coats and loosen their galluses and jerk at their lagging women.

On such a night a few ragged stars get all but lost in the haze that hangs overhead. The stadium is semi-circular with masses of white and spots of red, green, yellow and blue. The men wear coats. The girls and women wear light frocks, gay in coloring. Behind them the women and girls are smoking. At the open-air concert, their gesture of equality is complete. They drape themselves on the stone stairways, they perch their feet upon the railings.

There are concert stadiums and there are concert stadiums. Manhattan's is typical of Manhattan. Behind the orchestra stand a highway, runs in the sight of the audience. An endless parade of autos go tooting and honking by. Beyond the hill upon which stand the Gothic walls, gates and towers of City College beckon to the city's lights. Behind the stadium another street runs—a street of hawkers and autos. The music is constantly blurred by the city's noises. Nowhere but in Manhattan would this be tolerated. But here it is a part of the symphony. I often wonder why some native musician does not write it into a symphony. It would be a strange echo of Manhattan.

The concert ends and 15,000 pour through the gates—they pour down the hills to Amsterdam Avenue to mingle in the gateway of the street; they pour into subways and wait patiently for buses or taxis. I have often wondered at the patience of the New Yorker. The Russians troop back to their tenements. Or they trickle over toward the river. And here we are, back where we started.

PUTS SMITH IN LIGHT OF POWER AUTHORITY

Blaine Quotes Liberally from Nominees Remarks in Birmingham Speech

Birmingham—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York was referred to by Senator John J. Blaine as a "disputed authority" on the water power question, in an address Monday.

Senator Blaine quoted liberally from the Democratic presidential nominee's remarks on various occasions, in which the New York governor advocated as a solution to the waterpower question, that "the state must itself retain ownership and control of water power at its source if the people and not private interests are to be the real beneficiaries of its development."

Leadership in the United States senate in the light for public ownership of this natural resource rests, Senator Blaine said, upon George Norris, Republican, Nebraska, and Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

Senator Blaine also quoted from Charles Evans Hughes, Republican nominee for president in 1916, who, as governor of New York, said, in 1910, "these natural resources of industrial energy should not become the subject of injurious private control."

"There are two bills in Congress which the power trust is determined to defeat," Senator Blaine said, "those bills involve the generation of electric power at Muscle Shoals and at Boulder Dam, the one involving our southeastern states, the other the southwest. It is proposed by those bills to generate electricity under federal authority. They are at strategic points and affect the welfare of many states."

"Another federal project in Niagara Falls and the water powers to be developed upon the St. Lawrence as part of the lakes-to-the-ocean deep waterway project."

"Another great national project for the development of hydro-electricity is the possibilities of the Columbia River basin."

"There may be other equally important federal projects. The four projects, however, are essentially federal projects. There is no single state that could or would develop those projects. Their development involves interstate and international matters and therefore are essentially of federal importance. Except in consideration of such interstate and international cases, the development of our waterpowers should be left to the several states. Projects that do not involve the larger national aspect, that are complicated by interstate necessities or international obligations, are essentially proper projects for development by the respective states."

"THE STREET OF SIN," NEW EMIL JANNINGS DRAMA, HOLDS PROMISE

It is interesting how great stories come about. After finishing "The Way of All Flesh" his first American screen vehicle which has proved such a tremendous success, Emil Jannings famous character star, cast about for another role.

Together, von Sternberg and Glazer worked out a story called "The Street of Sin" with a setting in the London slums, east of Limehouse, a place thronged with the human riff-raff of poverty, the abode of skulkers and vagrants, brutes and bleary women, gibbering elders and children in tatters.

It concerns the transition of "Sledgehammer Bill" from a brute who rules the squalid streets with his powerful fists, to a man who strips himself of all meanness and devotes his life to the welfare of humanity.

His sweetheart is a girl of the streets, portrayed by Olga Baklanova, the noted Russian actress of the Moscow Art Theatre. The incentive of his regeneration is Fay Wray, who impersonates a Salvation Army lass in the slum district. Jannings' reformation in the beginning is merely a cloak to give him contact with Miss Wray so that he may seek an opportunity of satisfying his lustful longings.

An incident of powerful intensity marks his transition from a brute to a thinking man capable of judging right from wrong. Frustrated in his plan to possess Fay by a superstitious fear and a force that invests her with holiness, Jannings throws on all the force of reformation and leaves the Army shelter. He goes to a pub and drinks himself into a violent rage. Then he returns to the shelter and sets fire to it.

The building is in flames when Olga rushes out. She has followed Jannings to conversion but has taken up the new life sincerely. She hysterically tells Jannings that Fay is in the burning building. Instead of going to her rescue he prevents others from attempting to save her. She is seen in an upper window. The flames make a halo for her. Jannings sobers. He is aghast at what he has done. Flinching himself through the flames—but come to Fischers Appleton Theatre Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday for what is regarded as Paramount's finest Emil Jannings picture.

RAMON NOVARRO IN AN ENTIRELY NEW GUISSE

Ramon Novarro—as a philanthropic young English lord with an infatuation complex that get him into many a peck of trouble—is the central figure of the latest whimsical romance of the screen, in which the star makes his bow in an entirely new guise, in "A Certain Young Man," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle at the Elite Theatre today Tuesday and Wednesday.

Ramon is introduced with moustache and monocle, in the very height of fashion in London, but after he meets THE girl he discards both and tries to live down his past—with results that land him in many trials and tribulations. In his escape from these a real love story comes in, as charmingly romantic as any he has ever appeared in, and all done in an ultra-modern vein. The story would do credit to a Barrie—it more than does credit to Novarro.

It starts with the adventures of a young boulevardier whose flirtations are the talk of staid old London, and when he goes to Biarritz and other Southern France playgrounds to escape too many pretty women the real romance develops. Marceline Day is the heroine, and Carmel Myers and Renee Adoree play the rival charmers. Huntly Gordon, Bert Roach and others of note are in the cast.

Algonia, afternoon and evening; Beck—Dale and Appleton, same; Huber and Levan—Wabeno and Cranston; 4 p. m. and 8 p. m.; Reynolds-Pittsville 4 p. m., and Watonsa 8 p. m.; Blaine—Juneau and Watertown, afternoon and evening.

Sunday—La Follette—Neenah-Menasha 4:30 and Oshkosh, 8 p. m.; Beck speaking with him at each of these places; Huber and Levan—Minocqua and Tomahawk, afternoon and evening; Reynolds, Wausau 11 a. m. and Stevens Point 8 p. m.; Blaine, idle.

George H. Beckley, 545 W. Center-st left Monday morning for Hamilton Ind., where he will spend several days on business.

Miss Lorena Kerrigan, resumed her work Monday after spending two weeks vacation at Milwaukee.

Firemen Make No Excuses At Meal For Cub Reporters

Two girl "cub" reporters sitting at their two-decker table de luxe, eating from plates heaped with heavily seasoned potatoes, gravy and two kinds of beans, worried fifteen husky firemen in blue shirts not at all—this was the fireman's banquet for the "cub" reporters, and they were enjoying it as much as the guests. They made no excuses for the oilcloth tablecloth, for the chipped plates, for the benches which served as chairs or for the three cooking kettles which graced the middle of the table—for some reason or other the meat was favored with a pat of butter and the gravy was served in a bowl, but the other food was ladled in large helpings from large kettles.

And why should they worry about the messes of serving—they were out to show their mastery of the rudiments of cooking, and show it they did. The "cub" reporters had had a regular Sunday dinner at one o'clock, and the fireman's supper came at five, but nevertheless they ate with gusto, the well cooked food placed before them, though they couldn't of course, compete with six-foot firemen with appetites strangely akin to their physiques.

The reporters came fashionably late to the fireman's banquet, but they soon discovered this was an error never to be repeated. They were met with a storm of reproaches from the men who do everything on schedule, and no amount of apologizing could obliterate the fatal mistake. However, their speedy devouring of the food, unmarred by any afternoon tea politeness, soon assuaged the hurt feelings of the cook and his retinue, and the party went merrily on. The two kinds of beans, it was explained, were an especial garnish to the ordinary meal for the benefit of the guests, and the cook added that the two girls would be expected to consume the extra pound of legumes which had been added to the usual fare, for a maxim of the well-ordered kitchen of the fire department is that no food be left over from one meal to another.

The two-decker table was the feature of the meal that amused the reporters most, and made them more conscious that they were eating with people whose watchword was convenience. The second deck was an oblong center piece resembling a miniature piano bench, on which were placed the kettles of food, while the lower part of the table was used for eating. The central serving ground made for more space, but it necessitated jumping up from the bench and stretching one's neck to see if the bean supply was still adequate, and it obscured one's view of the banqueters across the table—but then, so does a huge flower centerpiece at a society function.

The girls offered to help wash dishes afterward, but they might have known better, for here again there was schedule. The two end men wash dishes, it was explained. This was something new. And the dishwashing penalty came to the women who were unfortunate enough to get the end seats, or were the two men scheduled to wash dishes required to sit at the two ends of the table. No, the truth was that the two unfortunate men happened to be sitting at the end, and end men was their designation.

Another dinner—cabbage. As long as that, too, was on schedule, the reporters decided not to comment, another faux pas by refusing to play. So they were taught the great fireman's game, the lightning mathematics of the cabbage sharks making their heads swim with 10's, 20's, 30's, 40's and 50's. Unfortunately, however, the men who had been elected to teach the same were on the second shift for supper, but despite their appetites they bravely continued to play in on the cabbage cradle while the food cooled on the table upstairs. Or was it bravely? It all depends on whether the cabbage or food is the consuming interest of the Appleton firemen, and even the women themselves can't answer that. At any rate, the reporters now understand why the change of the firebell when the peas are two holes from the end of the cradle might be a bit annoying.

HELPING HABIT FORMED WHEN A CHILD IS YOUNG

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
Mothers are apt to say, "In our day we simply had to pitch in and do our bit. We never expected anything else. We did it and it was good for us, but the new generation shan't won't work."

No, it isn't the new generation. It is the mothers themselves who are to blame.
One mother said half a dozen years ago, "When I was Gloria's age, I had to get up on cold winter mornings and milk the cows. Now imagine my daughter doing that! I'm going to see to it that she has a happy childhood at least. She can help me later on. There's plenty of time."

Gloria was twelve then. She is eighteen now. And I can't see the young lady so much as going to the door for the milk bottle in the morning. Her mother is not well and a cup of coffee before she gets up, is the doctor's orders. Does she get it? She does not.

To go back to Gloria's babyhood. What she is no longer due absolutely and entirely to her mother's handling. The bright little blue-eyed baby was made to feel from the beginning of her spoiled young life that the earth and all that is in it, rotated around her. The stars sang and the moon shone and the sun beamed, all for her babyhood. Greeks came bearing gifts. Father worked, mother worked, holidays existed, parties were planned, the house was cleaned, clothes made, meals gotten—all with the little girl right in the middle of it. Everything was for her.

With things in such a state, it was natural that her eyes should soon become turned in on herself.
"Oh, no! This world is all mine. It's a nice world. It likes me. I must be very important indeed."

After a while she began to make demands. By being unpleasant she could commandeer just about anything she wished.
When things came her way and while she was doing what she pleased she was as sweet as an angel. But she was terrible when she was crossed. And laziness was her middle name.

This was the Gloria whom her mother expected to "help later on."
Mothers must teach children the habit of helping almost from babyhood. Also the psychology of his mind must be looked into. Instead of looking in, as Gloria did, he must be taught to look out.

He must lose that ever-present consciousness of self, or rather, never gain it. His view must be big and broad and sympathetic. He must never be given a chance to exaggerate the importance of the first person singular.

Husband And Wife Both Court Judges In South

JUDGE H. F. ATKINSON RULES THE CIRCUIT COURT; JUDGE EDITH, THE JUVENILE COURT.

MALM, Fla.—There's an unique couple here. They do write their names Judge and Mrs. Atkinson. It is Judge and Judge Atkinson. For both husband and wife are local judges.

For still further novelty, both Judge H. F. Atkinson and Judge Edith were re-elected to their judgeships by an overwhelming vote in the same primary.

So far as is known, political history of America has never offered before such a fine example of the equality of the sexes and the equality of wife and husband before the law.

THEY DON'T REALLY COMPETE
Judge H. F. Atkinson is circuit court judge. Judge Edith prescribes over the juvenile court. She was appointed, in the first place, to fill the unexpired term of her predecessor. In 1924 she was elected and this year she led in the primaries, which shows her popularity.

Over 2000 children, many of them delinquents, have had their lives straightened out by this competent, sympathetic woman.

These two judges, husband and wife, maintain that men and women in the same profession have a bigger chance at married happiness than the average couple with different lines of work.

"We're exceedingly compatible—probably because we both get all our judging out of our systems during the day," Judge Edith laughed good-naturedly at the question asked. If two judges could live as one without friction.

"We find that we have so much to talk about when we have leisure that it is bewildering, sometimes. I'm a real advocate of having marriages founded on similar interests as well as love."

Judge Edith takes her Judgeship as a serious responsibility placed on her by her townsmen.

"I think women have tremendous responsibility as judges," she said. "My best hope for the children is to keep them in their homes." She said, "In the 2000 cases handled, she has sent only 23 boys to the state industrial school and only 143 to an orphan asylum."

"The failure of parents to control their children in early years is what fills the courts with delinquents," she stated. "That is one reason I believe so thoroughly in probation. For not only the child but the parents are on probation, and it often forces adjustments that mean happiness all around."

Founded on similar interests as well as love.

MOTHER STARTS SCHOOL WHEN CHILD STOPS

Ottawa, Kas. — (UP) — Mother and daughter will trade places in the educational world next fall when Mrs. Carrie B. Harbour returns to college as a student and Miss Verna Harbour, just out of college, becomes a teacher.

Mrs. Harbour has been teaching school to support herself and to provide a college education for her daughter. Now Miss Harbour will support the family and help her mother finish college.

The mother has been teaching for seven years in the Ottawa junior high school. Miss Harbour was graduated from Ottawa University with the highest honors in the class of 1928.

MARY and MOM Their Letters BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dear Mom:
I am no glutton for punishment. Consequently, the little invitation you suggested I extend to my ancient cousins is out. A little of my life might do them good, but a little of their life would finish me.

Here is one point where I disagree with you. I don't believe in inviting people to visit you in a spirit of obligation or charity.

If I ask anyone to visit me it means I really want them, and that I expect them to be good, congenial company. I seem to remember both of these cousins rather painfully from my childhood—women who always sat around and waited for someone else to start something.

Should they ever come to visit me of their own accord—that's a different matter. I'll do right by them. But I'm not a philanthropist, spreading joy and sunshine. I'm a selfish, modern woman, who is going to escape everything unpleasant every time she gets a chance.

Anyhow, life is quite exciting now that I have ceased, temporarily, to be a careerist, and am being just a dangerous female. Fortunately, Alice is taking quite an interest in Alice Carver, and so he doesn't notice that Mr. Shelton is taking quite an interest in me.

You know, I have decided that I love intrigue for its own sake. Mr. Shelton has a tremendous interest in me just now, because, by all the conventions, he shouldn't.

If I were free and unattached, I'd perfectly sure that I wouldn't think of him twice. When I see him and Alan together—and the two really like each other—I realize that Alan is much handsomer and younger, and much more my ideal of a man.

But I like the idea of interesting him. For I have a feeling that I do it slightly against his will. I am sure he was violently in love with this girl whom I am supposed to resemble. It would be so easy for me to reduce him to a state of abject slavery—since it is all in the cards—that at times I feel I ought to resist the impulse and fight in my own class where there is some wholesome competition.

But other times, when Alan wants to play bridge, while the moon is out on the water, and I catch a certain away look in Brother Shelton's eyes, I feel quite sure that there is no point in not facing the inevitable.

All my love, mom, darling.
MARYE.

RETURN OF CAPE MARKS SEASON'S CLOSE IN PARIS

Paris — (UP) — Capes are established in favor, if the fashionable gatherings which closed the official social season in Paris are as significant as dress-makers believe they are. Three-quarter length capes completed smart polo dot prints. Printed mouselines had capes to match and for evening wear there were more capes with scarf collars which tie in flaring bows. Smart Parisians prepare their costumes for the close of the social season with such earnestness that their apparel is taken as a declaration of the best feminine taste.

MONT BLANC GUIDES MUST SHOW METTLE

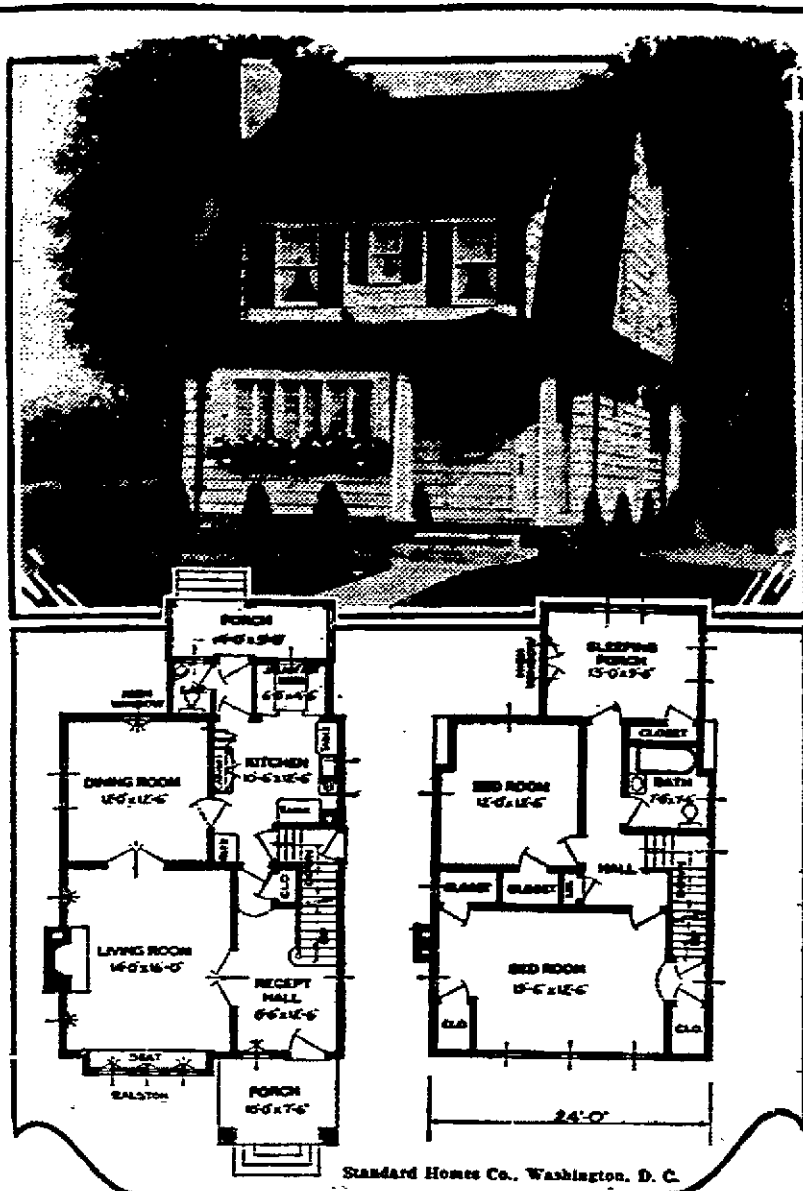

Chamonix, France — (UP) — Mont Blanc will soon be as safe for the average tourist as a crossing of the Champs Elysees. This is sufficient to indicate that it will not be entirely without its dangers. The departmental council, however, has decided to increase the number of accredited guides and has opened a series of severe examinations.

The first exams lasted a full week, with right-ascending and trailing, with and without dogs, over the most difficult peaks of the region. Among the successful candidates were Martin Farini, French skiing champion, and Jacques Bugnet, the hero of one of Mont Blanc's lives a year ago when he saved the lives of three companions by letting himself to the bottom of a gully. He carried one of them on his back through raging snow storm nearly three miles and fainted, with feet badly frozen, just as he reached a rescue hut.

A Liverpool cyclist has just completed his ninth European tour on a bicycle. He estimates that he has covered 50,000 miles in these tours.

There are 15 divorces for every 100 marriages in the United States; the majority of wives who divorce their husbands do so on the plea of cruelty or desertion.

THE "RALSTON" IS FRIENDLY

THERE is just a little touch that's different in the way the roof slopes in this well-built and expensive little home that gives it charming individuality.
"The Ralston," in fact, is not so little as it looks when you once get inside and see all the rooms it houses under its pleasing eaves. Its cost is as appealing as its appearance for this cream and brown home can be had for $6000 to $7000.

There is friendliness in the low stoop leading to the front door. And there seems to be a smiling welcome in the blooming window boxes one gazes at, waiting for the door to open.

A reception hall exudes a sense of spaciousness, in this age of crowded living. A window seat under the living room windows, and a cherry fireplace both invite visitors to make themselves at home.

The kitchen is a charming one for hot summer days. For a draft sweeps through from side to side and by opening the front and reception hall doors, from end to end. To top that there is an honest to goodness back porch to

A Torrent of Soapy Water Kept Hot by

The Cast-Aluminum Tub

THE Maytag was the original gyrofoam washer, which makes water do the washing. But the Maytag does more than that—it keeps the water hot to expand the meshes of the clothes, loosen the dirt and aid the cleaning action of the soap and it keeps the soap thoroughly mixed with the water where it will do the most good.

These are some of the reasons why the Maytag washes faster—an entire washing in an hour or so; washes cleaner—collars, cuffs and grimy overalls without hand-rubbing; washes delicate garments hand carefully.

Wringing the clothes is easy with the marvelous New Maytag Self-Roller Water Remover—another exclusive Maytag advantage. It is practically automatic in every operation.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY. THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

WELL, sure enough, this is the grip. "Oh, my," said he, "I was a kindly tip the fairy queen just gave us." Then he took a little slide, and landed safely on the ground beside the creek, and there he found the grip was fairly heavy. Now, just what could be inside?

And then the bunch heard Clowzy speak. Said he, "Come on let's take a peek. There surely must be some thing in the grip to please us all. It's mighty heavy. Just look there. Well, I can't hold it in the air." He lifted it about an inch and had to let it fall.

"Well, how are we to open it?" cried Clowzy. "We've no key to fit, and it seems locked securely. Tell me what we are to do? My knife is sharp enough to cut the thing in little pieces, but I wouldn't care to try it 'cause the little grip's brand new."

"Well, I should say not!" Clowzy said. "For once you've really used your head." He then looked over the grip and found a button on the side. "Oh, my," said he, "I think that I will push on this. It's worth the try." And as he pushed the button, the grip flew open wide.

"Hurrah!" It's open. "Carpy cried. "Anc now let's see what is inside." They turned the small grip over and some tools spilled on the ground. "Will someone kindly tell me, please what we are going to do with these?" said Clowzy, as the whole bunch looked and saw what they had found.

The mystic creek still stood nearby. A head came out and shouted, "I am here to tell you little lads how you can all be cheered. Just take those tools and build a man, right out of wood. I'm sure you can." And while the Tinies stared, amazed, the queer head disappeared.

(The Tinymites start building a wooden man in the next story.)

This may be a fast age, but there was more bustle in days of yore.

Burglars Worry Less, Live
Longest, Survey Reveals

Sofia—(AP)—Bulgaria and Spain are of them more likely after 50 and the lands of Mithuselahs, says Dr. Popov, state director of statistical research in Bulgaria.

Bulgarians, he finds after years of close investigation, live longer than any other people in the world. In the small Bulgarian kingdom, which has less population than New York city, there are 3,133 centenarians. Dr. Popov found that freedom from worry and plenty of depositions were the "fountains of youth" that kept these Bulgarians alive.

Spain, Bulgaria's closest competitor for the longevity of its inhabitants, the Bulgarian statistician found, has 355 centenarians, of whom 238 are women. Madrid alone claims 55, of whom 34 are women.

Dr. Popov points out that there are very few pleasures in Bulgaria, so few that the paucity must count upon their own and health. He says that the strong constitutions, rather than medical aid, account for Bulgaria's 3,133 centenarians who have gone far beyond the Biblical span of three-score-and-ten.

Investigation showed that only 14 of the 3,133 centenarians had ever received medical treatment. Vegetables, fruit, milk, cheese and bread constitute most of their food and drink. Most

SEEK NEW RECOURSE
IN ROYALTIES CASE

Madison—(AP)—Official opinion by the attorney general on question whether Wisconsin must refund thousands of dollars collected on incomes from patents and royalties since 1901 awaits information on whether a referendum is to be asked in the five to four decision of the U. S. Supreme court.

In that opinion the court held that a law of Massachusetts taxing such incomes is unconstitutional. The Wisconsin tax commission has asked the legal department whether the ruling means this state must pay back its taxes collected on royalties.

Franklin E. Bump, assistant attorney general, has written to learn if the decision is to be appealed, as appears likely in view of the five to four decision. If motion for rehearing is granted, there will be no occasion for performing an opinion until final decision is handed down by the court.

CALUMET COUNTY KAUKAUNA-LITTLE CHUTE-KIMBERLY NEARBY TOWNS

3,000 AT ANNUAL EAGLES' PICNIC AT LA FOLLETTE PARK

Even Rain Is Unable to Dampen Spirits of Merry-makers at Summer Outing

Kaukauna—Nearly 3,000 people attended the annual Fox River Valley Eagles' picnic at LaFollette park here Sunday afternoon and evening despite rain early in the afternoon which threatened to break up the affair.

Picnickers started gathering at the park early Sunday morning and shortly after noon a great crowd was on the grounds. Ample parking space was provided for automobiles in the park and on the streets in the immediate vicinity. Many families took their lunches with them and spent the entire day at the park.

While there was a heavy rain for about 10 minutes about 3 o'clock in the afternoon the big crowd merely sought shelter beneath the trees and in their automobiles and other than settling the dust and freshening the air this rain had no effect on the picnic.

The Pipe and Drum corps of the Appleton Eagles and the Menasha American legion and the drill team of the Ladies auxiliary of the Appleton Eagles paraded through the main streets of the town early Sunday afternoon and then to the picnic grounds. The Valley Melody orchestra of Menasha furnished music for open air dancing in a pavilion that had been erected especially for the occasion.

Eagles from Green Bay, DePere, Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh, Wrightstown, Kimberly and Little Chute attended the picnic. Local members of the arrangements committee were Joseph Dietzler, Charles Gorchals, Charles Faust, Joseph Steffens and A. C. Meitner.

BUILDS PLAYGROUND FOR ISLAND CHILDREN

Site Is Adjacent to Grounds Selected for New High School Athletic Field

Kaukauna—A crew of city workmen under Joseph Koehn, commissioner of the south road district, are grading a large piece of city property on the southern end of the island to be used by children as a playground. The land is adjacent to the property which is to be converted into a high school athletic field and is in the rear of the high school building.

The playground will be completed and opened to the children within the next few days, according to Alderman E. B. Roberts, fifth ward, at whose suggestion the playground is being built. The alderman pointed out that parents living on the island cannot send their children to the playground in LaFollette park on the south side or to the Park school playground on the north side because both are recreation centers are too far away for the little boys and girls to walk unaccompanied. Instead of playing in the streets as the children on the island are now forced to do, the alderman said, they will have a place where they can spend their time without fear of interruption.

It is proposed to install playground equipment on the site next year and the city will then have three complete playgrounds for the children of Kaukauna. The three are conveniently located so that children from any part of the city can reach them without trouble. Attendants have been provided for the playgrounds at LaFollette park and the Park school this year.

MULFORDS DETERMINED TO KEEP LEAGUE LEAD

Kaukauna—Perched on top of the league with two wins and no losses, the Mulfords play the Eagles in a softball Twilight league game Monday evening. The schedule for the rest of the week is as follows: Tuesday, Andrews Oils and the Shopers; Wednesday, Romans and the Thilmans; Thursday, Electricians and the Postoffice.

KAUKAUNA WINS EASY GAME FROM APPLETON

Queen Mary Disregards Union Working Hours

London—(P)—Queen Mary of England dwells in marble halls, but her daily life is busier than the average typist who casts awestruck glances toward Buckingham Palace as she hurries toward the timeclock every morning.

If the little typist knew it, her queen has already been up for an hour or two, attending household duties by nine or ten o'clock in the morning. Queen Mary has probably dealt with more correspondence than the typist will handle in an eight-hour day. Her Majesty, aged 61, is a tireless worker.

There is no trades union to limit the hours of the queen's working day. She rises at the call of a maid each day at 7 o'clock. Much of her correspondence consists of appeals for aid.

After disposing of her mail, Queen Mary turns to household matters. She is an excellent housekeeper and no detail of the huge task of running Buckingham Palace fails to reach her observant eye. Her sitting room is turned into an office for the remaining hours of the morning and there she receives her ladies-in-waiting, her householders, her private secretaries and even certain of her tradespeople. She gives her own orders and carefully checks the reports and expenditures.

It is said that Queen Mary can detect the shortcomings of a careless housemaid without looking, but her tact and kindness insure speedy correction without injured feelings and nowhere in her kingdom could one find a happier or more contented domestic staff than that of the royal household.

A story of the queen's housewifeliness and her motherly solicitude to those with whom she comes in contact even for a short period, is told by a London portrait painter who was commissioned a few years ago to paint a portrait of one of the princesses at Buckingham Palace. Each morning, as he

Hoover Publicity Men Fear Old Bugaboo, 'Bologna' Talk

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—Governor Al Smith when he refused to pose for the photographers laying bricks with the remark "That's bologna," only made it unadvisable.

Hoover won't pose for any "bologna" photographers, either. Smith has posed with his coat off, time and again, but if the photographers ever get Hoover in his shirt sleeves they can call it a good day's work.

Which calls to mind the unfortunate dilemma of the Hoover publicity staff. These boys have photos of Hoover fishing and fishing pictures of a candidate are obviously fine campaign stuff.

But when Hoover goes fishing he wears those frightfully tall stiff collars which he wears at all other times and it doesn't look quite natural. All the Hoover fishing pictures show him with that funny collar.

The publicity men, recalling certain strange photos of Calvin Coolidge as a dirt farmer, fisherman and cowboy, are anxious not to subject their candidate to any raspberries or similar cause. So they aren't tussling any more Hoover fishing pictures until they see if they can't get the candidate to fish just once with a soft collar or a bare neck.

"There are going to be a lot of funny speeches in this campaign," says a southern Dem crat, who has held political control of his state for years.

"In some states and many congressional districts it's going to be pretty hard to explain where we stand on the national ticket. I know some candidates who aren't going to dare say a word all through the campaign."

Smith and Raschok have said more than enough to embarrass many bone dry congressmen and some bone dry senators. All sorts of tight rope walking and delicate balancing is necessary when one promotes his own candidacy as dry and that of the national candidate as a wet. Some sort of an explanation is likely to be demanded by dry voters unless the minor candidate repudiates the ticket, which few care to do.

Senator Dill of Washington is meeting the problem by explaining that Smith is all right on everything except liquor and that if the voters will elect Smith and dry members of Congress like himself, they can depend on the said dry members to bogtie President Smith whenever he attempts to put over any modification legislation. Everything will then be lovely. Other candidates for re-election will follow Dill's solution, stressing the fact that prohibition isn't being enforced now, anyway.

Senator Wheeler's over-whelming majority in the Montana primaries was larger than any of his friends expected and his chances of re-election look very good. The most interesting phase of the contest was the fact that his opponent for nomination, former Governor Stewart, had no particular issue, and relied mainly on the plea that Wheeler had been devoting too much attention to the Chinese and Nicaraguan situations.

If elected, he said, he would represent Montana instead of Nicaragua and China. But the voters upheld Wheeler's interest in the administration foreign policy by a four to one vote.

Boss Bill Vare of Philadelphia still maintains his office in the Senate office building. Pending the decision of the election contest raised by William Wilson, Democrat, Vare is a senator-elect, neither voted nor kicked out of the Senate. The Warlick subcommittee of the Senate committee on privileges and elections continues to take oral testimony.

The next sessions will be in Pittsburgh and Washington. No decision can be made until Congress waits again. Meanwhile, there is no real vacancy as to Vare's seat. Vare apparently has hopes that he can obtain Hoover's support in his attempt to hold it.

SUNDAY GAMES

Kaukauna 8, Appleton 5
Kim-Little Chute 13, Green Bay 7
Fond du Lac 18, Nee-Menasha 3

It was the same old story Sunday afternoon at Brandt park. Whatever pitcher Manager Dutch Brautigan chooses to start a ball game this season is hit just hard enough so that Appleton cannot catch the enemy and then the relief hurler goes great guns, holding his opponents scoreless and fanning several the rest of the way. And all the fans pick on Dutch, saying why didn't he start the second pitcher. But it probably wouldn't make a bit of difference as the first man would lose the game and the second look like a worldbeater, no matter who started.

Coming back to Brandt park, Appleton lost another ball game Sunday, 8-5, and Kaukauna's sluggers were the triumphant players. Stoffel, who started for Appleton, worked well all the way but errors by his mates put him into one hole after another and naturally he couldn't pull out of all of them safely. Finally he was forced to have to hurl his best ball all the way and was bombed for enough hits to give Kaukauna eight runs. Ritten relieved him and allowed but a single hit and no runs, beside fanning four in 2 3/4 frames and the fans began, "It didn't he start the game" clamor.

Abbott hurled excellent ball and was backed well except in the second inning. He allowed Appleton just four safeties, three in the first inning, until the last half of the ninth inning when three more were landed safely. For six innings, from the second to ninth, he held Appleton hitless but three hard catches aided his cause.

SON TOMORROW FEATURY

Son Tomorrow and his best all-around games of the season to feature the day's pastime. The local second sacker got two hits and two runs in four bats by clouting on mammoth homeruns, the first clearing the left field fence by yards. He also missed another by inch. Smith, who was the senior for a hard catch. His batting drove in three of the five Appleton tallies and left him just one homerun behind Les Smith in the race for league honors. Beside this Son had four hard putouts, one a pivot of Appleton's only double, and four safeties. The latter included two one-handed pickups to his left in the grass between second and first. His only miscue was on a peg from Ashman on an attempt steal.

Van Wyck also recovered from his bat slump in good style with two hits in four bats. Smith, who was the senior for a hard catch. In the first game getting two runs on two very scratchy hits. After Ray Smith had fanned Moore hit down the third baseline and made first when Last, who was taking Schultz's place, took plenty of time getting to the ball, fielding it perfectly and making a good throw. He took second on a passed ball and tied third when Last, who had the bag, stole the base. Les Smith walked and scored a successful double steal with Moore, the latter scoring when Ashman begged to second and the ball was dropped after the runner had arrived. Smith continued to third on the play. Wenzel hit another roller down the third base line and the same thing happened as before. Smith scoring. Abbott hit into a double play. Last to Tornow to Radtke. Time of game—1:49. Umpire—Lepine, plate, Lamensky, bases.

Abbott hurled excellent ball and was backed well except in the second inning. He allowed Appleton just four safeties, three in the first inning, until the last half of the ninth inning when three more were landed safely. For six innings, from the second to ninth, he held Appleton hitless but three hard catches aided his cause.

The Trap is Set

By Cowan

I'LL DO IT! - I HAVEN'T BEEN ABLE TO SLEEP SINCE I HEARD THAT BRUCE HAD PLANNED TO LEAVE HIS FORTUNE TO LITTLE AMY, UNTIL POP INSULTED HIM. AND I DON'T INTEND TO STAND BY AND LET A MILLION SLIP THROUGH MY FINGERS IF I CAN WIN BACK BRUCE'S FRIENDSHIP WITH A LITTLE SALVE-AND BESIDES, HIS FRIENDSHIP MEANS MORE TO ME THAN HIS MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING! - BUT ANYWAY, IT'S SICK OF HAVING NOTHING BUT PRIDE -

- THE MINUTE I HEARD WHAT POP HAD DONE, I WAS SIMPLY ELABERGASTED AND HURRIED RIGHT OVER TO EXPLAIN. IT'S THAT BLOW ON THE HEAD - THE BOOTLEGGERS DID IT THE TIME THEN KIDNAPPED HIM. HE DOES THE MOST IMPOSSIBLE THINGS TO HIS BEST FRIENDS. OF COURSE, THEY UNDERSTAND AND OVERLOOK IT -

WELL - SLAMMING A DOOR IN A FRIEND'S FACE IS ALMOST AN UNPARDONABLE MISDEMEANOR BUT UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES -

WHAT'S ALL THE EXCITEMENT?

WAIT TILL I TELL YOU! I'VE SMOOTHED OVER EVERYTHING, AND BRUCE HAS INVITED US TO HIS HOTEL TO A FAREWELL BREAKFAST! I MIGHT HAVE A MEAL IN THE PRESIDENTIAL SUITE. I'M THRILLED!

WELL, WELL, THE LITTLE FLY ACCEPTS THE SPIDER'S INVITATION - MONEY IS A GREAT BAIT - TOP'S ALL READY FOR THE SHEARS - AND I'LL GIVE HIM SUCH A TRIMMING THAT A COLD CHILL WILL GO ZIG-ZAGGING UP HIS SPINE EVERY TIME HE HEADS A DOOR SLAM -

21466 No News (or "What Killed the Dog")
The Three Trees Frank Crumit

21495 I Wonder
Beloved Franklin Bauer

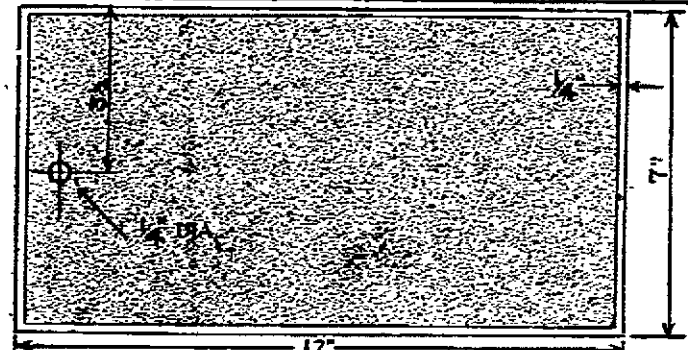

These are vocal selections that will cover a variety of moods. If you can listen to Frank Crumit's two numbers without cracking a smile... then you must be in love, in which case Bauer's sentimental songs will no doubt appeal to you. If neither of these have any effect, you had better see a doctor. Frank, reciting two well known stage selections, is at his funniest. His negro dialect in the first is particularly convincing. And who has not heard and enjoyed the "Three Trees", "There, there, and there?" Here the comic use of musical motives is clever and refreshing. To be perfectly safe, you ought really to have both these records. That will give you what insurance people call "full coverage."

Come in today and listen to these records on the ORTHOPHONIC VICTROLA

A Cutting Board

Every home should have at least one of these convenient cutting boards for bread, meat and vegetables. To determine its size and shape, consult with your mother. The board shown above is a convenient size, is easily made, and will be found very satisfactory for general use. Be sure to choose a wood free from knots or blemishes. Poplar or maple is a good selection.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-25.

The board should be beveled or chamfered on the cutting side. Measure off a quarter inch clear around to make this bevel uniform.

Bore a hole at the indicated place, using a quarter-inch auger bit so that the cutting board may be hung up if desired.

In boring your hole be sure you do not splinter the wood as the bit goes through. This may be avoided by turning the board over after you have bored half way through. All surfaces should then be carefully sandpapered to remove rough spots and edges. Either fine or old sandpaper should be used in finishing the board.

ANOTHER SMILE FOR TODAY

ABSOLUTELY, WHY NOT?
FIRST FOREIGNER (singing his English): How are you, I hope?
SECOND DITTO: Thank you, no doubt - Tit-Bits.

AND THEY'RE OLD
Two film stars met after a long separation.
"My, Sadie," said one, "it's ages since I've seen you. Anything new with you?"
"Two husbands." - Tit-Bits.

THROW HIM OUT!
WOULD-BE CONTRIBUTOR: Here's my manuscript which I offered you a year ago.
EDITOR: But, if I refused it a year ago, what's the use of bringing it back now?
"Well, you have had a year's experience since then." - Weekly Telegraph.

NOT SO GOOD
"Did you notice how pleased Mme. Durand was when I said she looked no older than her daughter?"
"No, I was watching the daughter. She turned quite pale." - Le Moutique, Charleroi.

America Loses Three First Places In Olympic Fights

Olympic Stadium, Amsterdam—(AP)—After losing out in all three of Monday's final events in the Olympic track and field competition the United States athletes saw the Olympic 100-meter championship go to Canada, the 400-meter hurdles to England, and the hammer-throw to Ireland, all in upsets of varying degrees.

The best the Americans could do in these events was to place fourth and sixth in the dash, second and third in the hurdles and third, fifth and sixth in the hammer.

The winners were comparative unknowns in two of the three events while Lord Davy Burghley of England, who won the 400 meter hurdles was listed as one of the most promising contenders but was given little chance to beat the American, Morgan Taylor, who was defending his championship won in 1924. Taylor was only third Monday, being beaten by his countryman Frank Ouel of Iowa as well as by Burghley. The time was 53.25 seconds when was not nearly as good as Taylor has done, but was fast considering the track.

Percy Williams, British Columbia schoolboy, sprang the big surprise in the 100 yard dash by defeating the world's best, including the highly rated Americans, Frank Whitford and Bob McAllister, who could do no better than fourth and sixth respectively. McAllister and Legg of South Africa, who was given first place tentatively, finished close together that the final award of places had to be postponed until Monday of the race could be studied. Jack London, British negro, and George Lamour the German took second and third in the race which was won in 19.45 seconds, 1.5 second slower than the Olympic record.

Iris-Americans had been romping off with the hammer throwing championship for Uncle Sam repeatedly in past Olympics, but this time an Irishman, throwing for Ireland, won when Pat O'Callaghan put the ball away 168 feet 10 inches, far beyond the goal of Sweden by four inches. Edmund Black, a member of the Americans, was a poor third, more than 7 feet behind, while his teammates, Don Gwinn and Frank O'Connell trailed the Italian Poggelli, who was fourth.

QUESTION OF LIQUOR NOT IMPORTANT ONE IN HOOVER CAMPAIGN

Republican Candidate Not to Be "Stamped" by Issue, Report Says

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—Governor Al Smith's statement reiterating his stand for modification of the prohibition laws, followed as it was by representations from some eastern Republican national committeemen that Herbert Hoover should say something to help them corral wet votes in their area, is not going to stampede Hoover on the wet and dry issue.

Hoover is likely to be found taking the position that prohibition is not properly a partisan question. It was effected by legislation on a non-partisan basis at a time when two-thirds of the nation was already dry by law. The history of the prohibition movement shows that it has always had this non-partisan character. Hoover's reasoning is therefore likely to be that, if the experiment of prohibition is a failure, or if the present laws are too drastic or inadequate, the situation ought to be solved without any of the complications of partisan politics.

The Smith statement seems unfortunate, as a matter of fact, to some advocates of modification. They have felt that if solution of the problem lay in any direction other than a continuation of the present national policy, that solution must be worked out intelligently, free from personal or political prejudice and with only the national welfare in mind. They see Smith making a social problem a political football.

In his speech of acceptance Hoover is not expected to go far beyond the utterance of the Republican platform for enforcement. Smith is expected to stress again the wet issue in his speech. But it is not believed here that Hoover will be found making any declaration that will establish prohibition as an issue beyond the point which the Democrats may be able to carry the question themselves.

Hoover has called prohibition "an experiment of the nation," and beyond acceptance of the Republican platform has said nothing further.

Strangely enough, the theory that prohibition is not a party issue has been most frequently uttered this year by Hoover's arch-enemy, Senator Jim Reed of Missouri. Reed, however, was inspired by the desire for party harmony and for his own nomination. He undertook to stand somewhere between the extreme dries of his party and the extreme wets.

Now Smith, by his nomination and his subsequent words and actions, has emphatically taken the issue. Owing to Smith's record and known sentiments, it would have been an issue anyway. But he wanted to leave no doubt about it.

The fundamental difference between the position of two candidates in this year's doubtful states is opposed to prohibition in its present form, whereas Hoover believes the country is by no means yet convinced that its "experiment" is noble in purpose, it has failed.

FREEDY UPHOLDS SALE OF INSURANCE BONDS

Madison—(AP)—Milton A. Freedy, commissioner of insurance, disagrees with the state banking commission and the attorney general who held the single premium life insurance policies to be an infraction of the state banking laws. Mr. Freedy is prepared to defend his position in court if the occasion demands it.

The attorney general informed the banking commission that policies issued by the Guardian Life Insurance company of Madison, and other insurance companies in the state, violate the state banking laws.

The insurance commission has approved these certificates two or three years and contends they are valid.

ROBINSON IS TERMED A SELF MADE MAN

VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE WAS BORN IN ARKANSAS CABIN

Joe Robinson Lived in Backwoods and Studied by Light of Fire Place

Lonoke, Ark.—The creaking wagons and flashing axes of America's pioneers have gone into the limbo of the outmoded; but their echo, preserved in that old tale that always begins, "He was born in a log cabin—" still lingers to color the presidential campaign of 1928.

Curtis of Kansas was born on an Indian reservation and Herbert Hoover went to Oregon when that was a word of glamour and romance; and Joseph T. Robinson, nominated by the Democrats as the running mate of the city man, Al Smith can look back to a boyhood in the old Arkansas frontier.

Robinson was born in a log cabin, as was Abraham Lincoln. He grew up amid almost primitive conditions, sprawling on a rough-hewn floor at night to read by the light that came from burning pine knots in a great fireplace. He learned his three R's in a school house where the pupils sat on benches that were merely split logs.

All the elements of the great old story, in other words, are there. The hardships of the pioneers, once more are justified by their children.

BORN IN LOG CABIN

On the outskirts of Lonoke there is a little grove of magnificent oak trees. Facing the road stands a neat frame house. Behind it, dreaming under the oaks, stands the homely log cabin in which Joseph T. Robinson was born.

The cabin dates back three-quarters of a century—antiquity indeed for that part of America that lies west of the Alleghenies. It was built in 1853 by the senator's father, Dr. James Robinson.

Dr. Robinson was born in New York City. He removed to Illinois while in his teens, studied medicine there and then came to Arkansas. Arkansas was then the Arkansas of tradition—a thinly settled region of profusion of mud roads, half-starved towns, endless swamps and uneducated but hospitable settlers. In 1852 Dr. Robinson married Miss Matilda Jane Swann of Tennessee, and cast about for a homestead.

PAID 50 CENTS AN ACRE

Just off the main highway road, then the main artery of travel, Dr. Robinson bought 500 acres of land at 50 cents an acre. With his own hands he erected the cabin that was to be his home—the cabin that now sleeps beneath the oak trees.

Trees were felled, roughly shaped with axe and adze and hauled to position by oxen. At the ends of the logs, where the walls of the house met, holes were bored clear through and great wooden pegs were inserted. The pioneers built sturdily, if not elegantly. The old cabin is unkempt today but notrickety.

At the north end was the chimney, made of clay and mud over a wood foundation. The fireplace would hold four-foot logs; the neighboring swamps and lowlands furnished a profusion of pine knots, by the light of which the family could get light to read on winter nights.

Being a frontier doctor was no job for a weakling. For that matter, the frontier itself was no place for a weakling. But the doctor, perhaps, had a little harder than most. Dr. Robinson, for instance, was the only doctor in a region 100 miles across. He spent much time in the saddle, riding the long trails to his scattered patients.

ONE OF 11 CHILDREN

It was in August, 1852, that Joseph Robinson was born, the ninth of 11 children. His boyhood was a busy one; no Arkansas doctor in those days would have dreamed of practicing his profession to the exclusion of all else, and the Robinson home was surrounded by a sizeable farm, on which the children did much of the work. When the future vice presidential nominee was still a small boy he was getting up daily at dawn, eating a hasty breakfast and going to the fields to guide a plow drawn by a mule over the long hot acres, putting a jug of water in a corner of the rail fence against the heat of the day.

THE OLD SWIMMING HOLE

But his boyhood had its compensations. There was, for instance, the old swimming hole; a delightful pool almost completely shaded by great cypress trees, where it was always cool and shady and where a boy could swim and dive and holler without the bother of a bathing suit. The senator's brother E. R. Robinson, recalls that Sunday swimming was prohibited.

—The earliest picture in existence of Sen. Joseph T. Robinson, taken when he was 20. 2—The old swimming hole is the same today, except the boys are different. 3—The cabin birthplace of Senator Robinson. 4—Professor C. C. Rice, Robinson's school teacher, is still farming.

but that the boys often went away. Detection on such occasions meant a parental application of the hickory and Mr. Robinson recalls, meditatively, that "Father was a strong man, too."

The doctor had something of a library, unlike most of his neighbors; and young Joe spent his evenings sprawled in front of the fireplace with a book. His eagerness to learn about the outside world is illustrated by the reminiscences of Judge Thomas C. Trimble, now 81, who first met Joe when the boy was a youngster of nine or ten. The judge, traveling through the country, was passing the Robinson home and was invited by the doctor to stay overnight.

"While we were talking at the gate, a little barefoot boy with a hoe over his shoulder came up," says the judge. He looked the typical farm lad—trousers hanging by one suspender and one pants leg rolled up above the knee. At his father's suggestion, he helped me stable my horse and we soon became excellent friends.

"After supper Dr. Robinson and I sat on the porch and discussed politics. The rest of the family soon went to bed, but little Joe stuck by us, hanging on every word we said. We talked until midnight, but I believe the little chap was reluctant to go to bed even then."

TAUGHT SCHOOL AT 16

Joe Robinson went to school in a primitive frame school house. The benches were split logs held up on pegs driven into the round side; there were no desks. At the age of 16 he became a teacher himself, thereby earning enough money to go to the University of Arkansas. When he left school he sought out Judge Trimble and studied law in his office, doing all the stenographic work and acting in addition as a sort of janitor and errand boy in return for the privilege of occupying a back room and reading the judge's law books. After a year or so of this he went to Virginia and studied law at the state university, returning in 1885 a qualified attorney to become Judge Trimble's law partner.

HOLD STATE, LOCAL GOVERNMENTS FOR SAFETY VIOLATIONS

Increased Compensation Is Granted Workmen Under Some Conditions, Is Ruling

Madison—(AP)—State and local governments are responsible for violation of the industrial commission's safety orders affecting buildings and equipment. The attorney general has informed A. J. Altmeyer, secretary of the commission. States, villages, cities and towns are, therefore, liable for increased compensation granted to employees when they are injured, through the government's violation of safety orders.

Such governmental divisions are affected only by commission order relating to "owners" and not by its regulations governing "employers" the opinion said.

That is, if an employee of state, city, town or village is injured by the collapse of the capitol or city hall, or any other building owned by the government, the government would be responsible. And if a safety order had been violated, the injured employee would be entitled to 15 percent increased compensation.

If, however, the employee is injured in some manner not connected with buildings or equipment, the government subdivision would not be responsible.

The significance of the ruling, Mr. Altmeyer says, is that the state waives any claim it may have had to exemption from the safety orders of the industrial body.

Moreover, he considers it unlikely that an employee might be injured in any manner which does not involve the government as an "owner."

It is entirely clear to him how such accident could occur but suggests that possibly an employee traveling on governmental business, who is injured in an accident which did not involve the state or city as an "owner," probably could not collect compensation.

SAY TELEVISION NOT AT PROFITABLE STAGE

Radio Experts Say It Will Be a Long Time Before It Will Be Common

New York—While C. Francis Jenkins, the Washington inventor, has started on a regular schedule of broadcasting motion pictures by radio, engineers here are skeptical about its financial practicability at present.

Almost in the same breath, however, they deny that even television, let alone broadcasting of motion pictures, which is a step this side of it, is a vague dream. So many reputable firms have been working on this, under supervision of the radio's greatest radio engineers, that any doubts as to its possibility should be discarded.

It is money, however, that is holding up television as a practical affair. The Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York, after experimenting with television, have between Washington and New York some time ago, admitted that the equipment was too expensive for practical use. Someone has estimated that this single test cost $25,000.

In South Africa, however, a television broadcasting transmitter is being offered at only $3,000, while the receiving outfit is quoted at $150, the price of a good modern radio receiver.

The South African broadcasting stations are said to be negotiating with a British television company for the purchase of their sending and receiving sets at these prices.

Jenkins, in his experiments with television and motion picture broadcasting, has said he has been spending $1000 a week on the tests. Yet, at present, his apparatus transmits only silhouette pictures.

Television receiving equipment developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, of the General Electric Laboratories, is said to have cost at least $1000, and it is still only in the experimental stage.

AUCTION OF PELTS BRINGS IN $12,000

State Gets Money Realized from Sale of Seized Furs and Weapons

Madison—(AP)—A total of $12,463.68 has been added to the conservation commission's funds through sale of confiscated furs throughout the year.

The last sale of the fiscal year, held in Milwaukee Friday, brought $3,006. Another sale is to be held for disposal of 77 beaver pelts and six otter still in possession of the commission.

Beaver is the favorite animal among fur law violators because of their comparative abundance and their high value, the commission reports. Confiscated beaver furs sold by the commission at three sales this year brought $7,370.

The variety of illegal fur trading in Wisconsin is shown by the great variety of animals taken. Because most of the furs are taken by wardens when violators try to dispose of them, close co-operation is necessary on the part of Wisconsin and neighboring states. Wardens from Minnesota and Wisconsin work together on many cases and wardens from other states have authority to make arrests across the boundary lines.

Other confiscated articles are in possession of the commission, including guns and traps. These will be sold at auction before the hunting and trapping season opens. The commission values the first arms in its possession at several hundred dollars. Most of the guns are deer rifles and shotguns.

NEW LAW GIVES POSTAL MEN MORE TIME OFF

Through a recent change in postal laws, all postal employees are allowed to take six months vacation and sick leave in one fiscal year instead of but 30 days as was the previous rule, according to F. E. Wettengel, acting postmaster.

Mr. Wettengel received word of the change this week from the federal postal department at Washington, D. C. Under the postal rules, each employee receives 15 days of leave of absence per year with pay, and also ten days per year sick leave with pay. He need not take this each year but may allow the time to accumulate and then take it all at once.

DESTROY BUSHES TO PROTECT WHITE PINE

Madison—(AP)—Approximately 21,000 wild currant and gooseberry bushes have been uprooted in two weeks by representatives of the department of agriculture in Dunn county in their fight against white pine blister rust.

Blister rust cannot spread without the aid of currant and gooseberry bushes, upon which part of the life cycle is passed, the department says. Hence most of the eradication work is devoted to destroy near white pine stands. The department, 100,000 acres of pure white pine remaining in the state, is in the three counties, Oneida and Shawano.

Next to fire, white pine blister is considered the greatest limit factor in reforestation in Wisconsin. Through cooperation with the conservation commission, the department of agriculture hopes to be able to provide protection against it by requiring all who apply for white pine seedlings to agree to remove all currant and gooseberry bushes within 900 feet of the planting.
